Thread: Walmart closing 269 stores \(updated\)

mrnapolean1 - January 16, 2016, 12:21 pm

Walmart announced Friday that it was shutting down 269 stores and laying off thousands of employees.

The move will affect more than 16,000 employees, including 10,000 in the US.

All of the stores will close by the end of this month.

The closings include 154 locations in the US — 102 of which are the company's smallest stores, called Walmart Express, which have been in pilot since 2011.

I don't like Walmart cannot stand the company. But they are open 24 hours....
I also used to work for them. i feel sorry for the associates that worked in those stores listed....

To late for that, when Amazon surpassed them they woke up. Hate Walmart, Love Amazon though.

Does that mean we'll get less videos and pics of weird people in Walmarts?

Holy shit 269 stores.

RIP income.

Actually, this will lead to increased income (in the future).

The stores are being closed to dramatically cut down costs.

These are their smallest stores, which are providing the least revenue and have comparably high costs.

They aren't that stupid.

Texas got hit hard

hopefully people will find a nex job fasst, but i doubt it

BeardedShark - January 17, 2016, 4:31 am

This shit happend in my country too, they shutd down all the factories, and by the time they opened kaufland...auchan...penny..lidl..and so on, but they didn`t hire so amount of ppl which worked in the factories...

These are very sad stories....16,000 people with no job...

Texas got hit the hardest with the closing of 29+ stores. Being one of the largest states in the US we had a large magnitude of Walmart Express (a micro-sized Walmart) stores.

One of them being located in a town of Kemp. People in Kemp are upset because now they have to drive to the next town/city to get groceries.

Meanwhile in Grandview they have Brookshire Brothers (formally known as Davids Supermarkets) to fall back on.

I-I - January 17, 2016, 8:53 am

They've been trying to open a new one here for awhile now. There's already 2 not 15mins away from each other and they're opening a new one right in the middle. They haven't been allowed to build it until recently there was a fire started by "kids" at the location and they've been developing the land ever since. The 2 Wal*Marts we have now are Super Wal*Marts and the new one is going to be an Express... So fucking stupid.

There shouldn't be any development. Walmart is ditching the Express grocer business.

Walmart is more focused at walmart.com and their profitable supercenters.

that really sucks that alot of people will be losing jobs

MysteryHF - January 17, 2016, 11:58 am

As long as they're not closing my wlamart in NJ i'm ok.

THE NORTH FACE - January 17, 2016, 12:00 pm

They're probably closing because all these people are ranting about $15 and hour to stand behind a counter and itch their nuts. I'd close my stores if I had to pay that amount of money out.

Well it's going up. Just checked the article, it's called "Neighborhood Market" but is 100% a Wal*Mart. I don't want to link the article because of security reasons.

They have been trying this for years. Then a fire burned the forest down and they got permission to build.

Daaang Texas(where I reside at the moment) did get hit hard, my condolences go out to all those families that will be affected. ???

lul, i love how they opened up and destroyed other businesses and then after sucking all the money dry they left.

Neighborhood markets are different from the Express stores.

Those are Walmarts that are about the same size as Aldi/Brookshire Brothers/your local small supermarket

They will also typically have a couple of gas pumps for convenience.

So, their closing 269 stores it's not that big of a deal. Their only letting go of like 14 cashiers.

TyrantKingBen - January 20, 2016, 7:45 pm

I heard they were making new Neighborhood Markets and Super-Centers though, essentially out with the old in with the new.

They are, They are still building new Neighborhood markets and Supercenters.

Walmart is focusing their business efforts on the Supercenters, Neighborhood markets, and walmart.com.

They are abandoning the express store/small store concept thus why they are closing all of the express stores as well as low performing Neighborhood Markets and Supercenters.

The small walmarts may go by these names:
Walmart 2 Go
Walmart Express etc.

mrnapolean1 - January 22, 2016, 6:14 pm

I went to #3822: 416 N Third St., Grandview, TX today. (hence why I have the picture)

But me and another customer where talking while we where waiting in line to check out on what the next owner could do with the building.

It would be perfect for a Aldi.

Everything at this location above (expect tobacco, beer, prescriptions, prepaid wireless cards, and fuel) was 50% off the marked price.

I bought 20 cans of Axe bodyspray for less than $40.

yloeybht - January 22, 2016, 6:17 pm

Walmart is losing the business to Amazon. Just wait a couple of years. You will see walmart bankrupt. They cannot compete with Amazon and Amazon will take over. No more grocery shopping soon... you will get groceries delivered every week to your house. Anything you want or need will get shipped to your home. I think it's end of a retail era. Now, everything will be computerized and you will just place orders. The only stores left are convince stores.. like gas stations.

Amazon isn't the only other retail store out there. Walmart has something that Amazon doesn't have Brick and mortar store fronts.

Then don't forget about other grocers/retailers like Albertsons, Big lots, Save a lot, Winn Dixie (depending on location), Tom thumb, Kroger (mainly Texas), Brookshires (another Texas grocer), and many others.

Other retailers like Target and Kmart are still alive and kickin.

Elegant - January 22, 2016, 10:26 pm

Thank god the Walmart where I live isn't being shut down. I couldn't see it happening anyways.
