Thread: I got robbed and i know who did it. I need someone to track his cell phone number

YoungTroubleThaGawd - January 24, 2016, 3:55 pm

If anyone knows how to track peoples locations using their cellular number please let me know ASAP.

B?o?s?t?o?n - January 24, 2016, 3:57 pm

me but im not going to do it free

Linxy - January 24, 2016, 3:58 pm

Bruh do that cia shit and call him 3 times from different spots and triangulate his location.

Duh.

Black Kodak - January 24, 2016, 4:02 pm

i work for the ... let me know the number and ill do this for a low price.

YoungTroubleThaGawd - January 24, 2016, 4:23 pm

What tf you talking bout bro? I on even know how it works .

Please shut up and turn off your computer.

You can't "track" someone's location by phone number.
Only the provider can do that.

Varane - January 24, 2016, 4:27 pm

Don't worry guys i am on the case, play my theme song.

You can see who his provider is.
But I'm pretty sure you can't track down his location.

Proof me wrong.

My brother works for NASA, I can see every footstep you take.

Queen Cin - January 24, 2016, 5:01 pm

Your best bet is to call the provider and SE their information.

The people on this thread have no clue.
OP literally isn't trying to "track" the phone.
Use common sense.

He/she's most likely trying to find the owner, which most of you seem to think is impossible?
OP, just do a reverse phone search. Google is your friend.

Thanks man. I just want their address but idk where to start

B4ROT - January 24, 2016, 6:05 pm

I can probably do this for you. Wouldn't be too hard to get a name / addy off of a cell number. Hit me with that number in PM.

Just make sure he isn't an HF user or anything.

411.com

whitepages.com

your best bets.

Tenseigan - January 24, 2016, 8:09 pm

I'll do this for you.

I won't charge you either, I have a premium Spokeo account so I wouldn't mind looking it up.

PM me the number.

You need quite a lot more clearance than "Someone on hf said he was robbed" to track down anyone using CIA operative's resources.

And plus the CIA agent would probably be arrested for even performing the lookup.

Text the number innocently from someone elses phone asking to meet up or something?

Vicellus Drum - January 24, 2016, 8:25 pm

Realistically though, the best bet is go to the police and provide some sort of evidence that shows that you know that it was that specific person who robbed your house. They'll get a warrant, search the premises, and you'll probably either get your stuff back or compensation for whatever they sold.

Ace Of Jesus - January 24, 2016, 10:15 pm

Call your phone provider, ask them to track your SIM card, and might work.

Innovative - January 28, 2016, 9:34 am

I can attest that tracking (pinging) is real and can be done, as I've had access to a provider until they recently shut down. A few of you mentioned you are still capable of doing this...if so I would be interested in your fee.

It can only be done on GSM phones (largely phased out in favor of CDMA).

OP, if you were robbed, I highly suggest going to the police with your evidence. I and my company offer private investigative services, but I doubt you can afford us. :/

Unless he stole several hundred from you, it really isn't worth more than a police report.

BlyndGrdian - January 28, 2016, 2:08 pm

Try entering the numbering of the search bar in you Facebook account. If that doesn't turn anything add a 1 in front of the 10 digits and give that a shot. Sometimes that works. If your target has his/her phone number linked to an account AND they have their search settings to allow them to be searched for by their phone number this might work.

True Demon, I happen to be in the same field. My limited time here on HF may affect your response, I understand and not looking to trade names, but I am interested in what you specialize in, and I likely could be an asset to you at times. I've developed some great niche areas, and transitioned away from most of the commercial clients to the private side. Pays better and I like the quality of clients. Let me know if you are interested, and if I need to qualify myself some I can do so. Good Luck OP.

The-One - January 29, 2016, 5:29 am

If you really want his ass you can find someone to get you SS7 access (it was offered on HF before).

People saying it isn't possible to track the phone are just ignorant. SS7 was made in the 70's hence it has lots of vulnerabilities.

Most providers these days still use SS7 so that would be your best bet.

Description - January 29, 2016, 5:39 am

Just send me the phone number ???

tolis_gorilas - January 30, 2016, 3:55 pm

Just go to report the rob to the police. How do you know who did it?
