Thread: Nex: Another One \(The Sequel\)

Tyranus. - January 25, 2016, 10:15 pm

Just be careful. I would advise not joining his group, or working with him on any projects. 95% of us already know that Nex will do whatever it takes to make a couple bucks. In fact, he'd probably start a charity and keep the money for himself. Anyways, in order to convince the remaining 5%, enjoy the little skype log below (full permission from watson to post this).

lol nothing surprising What I'm more surprised about is how the guy got accepted as owner but meh the thread serves no purpose tho there's been plenty of "Warnings" if anyone deals/gets scammed by the user they deserve it.

Exactly, and people choose to deal with him, and then complain about it over and over again.

Nex can't code, this is why this loop will never end.

These groups are for money. Their not for fun, not for the community, and certainly not out of the goodness of their hearts.

What do you expect them to do with a group, besides sell it at one point?

As soon as the word "group" is mentioned on HackForums, it is synonymous towards scammers, exit planners, butt buddies and keyboard warrior drama.

Unfortunate for you, you're in the loop.

I'm out of the loop now. Unless you're stating I can't code? ?

And I've seen every (potential) group member/owner say the exact same.

Actually I owned a group for like 7-8 months not as long as I would have wished but I bought it for $7.5k plus the $250 fee and didn't profit at all. Sold it for $7k if I recall right or around that sum. I don't think there's a issue with owners making money out of there groups but there's a correct way in doing it just not the way it's being done nowadays

Groups should not be milked for money, period. Making a little extra money off of certain group projects is one thing, but selling buyins, renting the group out, selling leadership spots is just taking it to a new extreme.

Redwall - January 25, 2016, 10:32 pm

Well it's safe to say this thread is completely dumb.

In what way did I say the only way it was acceptable to rent out groups or buyins or leadership spots?

Unless you have something that is worth buying into I'm fully against it even then it's meh but I was talking about it being acceptable in other ways products and shit like that stuff that isn't really pissing off the community I guess.

The fact that people still believe purchasing leaderspots is profitable is funny.

Unfortunately it is otherwise I don't think nex would have been able to sell so many even after so many scam reports and "Community" alerts on the user.

If only users took 5-10 minutes to check a users history in other deals with users.

I think they should be allowed to make money with the group, sure that's your investment. You profit off investments, as is the goal.

But charging for membership spots, leadership spots etc. These leaders are just looking for a quick flip in their investment, and when they begin to sell these spots you can see where the group is heading.

These groups are so pathetic nowadays they require all their users to post in the group-subforum in order to avoid being kicked out. If the group was cool enough, you wouldn't have to force people to post, threatening to kick them out of the group. If there was actually any incentive to post or share, there would be posts all the time.

If you require your members to post on your subforum to make your group look good, the group already isn't doing too good, IMO.

#LOL

To be honest, ever since I've returned from my vacation ban.

90% of the groups here all look the same.

With the flashy lights and colorful themes, I don't even know which one is categorized as which lmao.

Sakuto - January 26, 2016, 6:58 am

In my honest opinion, it look like a joke, but you're taking it way too seriously :(.
