so for 1 dollar a week youll run my client to get me mins so i can then send that traffic to my site of choice.

Well i got my own server rack running and when i use to need hitleap i ran it on there so your doing the same thing basically. i dont have a need for it but this is cheap for if someone wants traffic to a site.

/Ohh yh, edit, youll need someones password and login to get them mins from there client :/

Basically anyone who wants to rack up minutes for their Hitleap account can use my VPS as it is free and I don't use it that much. As for the password and login, I will be helping clients over teamviewer or join.me, so they can enter the information for themselves rather than give me the details. That way the customers' information is secured and I do not have to deal with the potential claim of stealing credentials. So it is a win-win for everyone ?
