Thread: A begginer's take to montage making "CS:GO"

Purest. - February 12, 2016, 6:27 am

Hey guys, I was getting bored recently and decided to make a montage out of a few clips I had on my hdd, I know they are not great but yeah.

I'm new to montages :D

[Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9e_tzhWXgKM]

What do you think?

How can I improve on further montages?

Thanks ?

Lower the brightness/contrast effect a LOT.

Learn to use velocity (Meaning you're probably going to want to record your clips in 300+fps)

Use cl_draw_only_deathnotices 1

Get rid of the crosshair

Cut the boring parts out where you're just waiting for someone to peek or whatever.

Thanks, 300 + fps, I disable vsync and how does shadowplay record that, is it possible?

Maybe move away from the dubstep. I find it a bit intrusive and takes away from the game play

Firstly, I wouldn't enable vsync at all. It creates a huge amount of input lag when you play.

To record at 300+fps just type demo_timescale 0.2 into the console when you want to record your clip. Then just record at 60fps. Then use this: <http://www.divx-digest.com/software/avifrate.html> to set the video to 300fps.

Please god change the music. Its annoying.

You want to pick a color correction that isn't so subtle, but fits in with the flow and the atmosphere of the video.

Not alot of choice for music out there, we need to use copyright free music.

Actually, there is tons of copyright free music to use.

Thanks man, those can really help!

TheSuspect - February 13, 2016, 6:00 am

Why is there so much contrast.

Stage-6 - February 13, 2016, 7:34 am

Colour correction looks horrid. Sorry.
