Holy shit this short anime hit me with the feels so fucking hard my ass hurts jesus christ.

Duyere - February 13, 2016, 11:48 am

I'm on episode 3 and I've neglected to watch it because the feels.

RainbowHentAi - February 13, 2016, 12:12 pm

You knew what was gonna happen, but it still makes you feels

You don't need to make a thread every time you finish a show.

Watch it fam and take it in the butt like me

Episode 1 really set the feels. However, the next few episodes didn't hit me as much. Infact, by episode three I had already confirmed my suspicion about what's going to happen. As a result, I didn't want to watch any more because the predictable plot killed it for me.

At the very end when he is introduced to his new partner, I think his new partner is Isla by the way he reacts

Aura - February 13, 2016, 2:57 pm

Wow, just finished 2 episodes and it already made me cry, what the fuck.

ikr man if you need someone to cry on I'm here :D

Octavia - February 13, 2016, 8:40 pm

Well I planned to watch this at some point but if it has that much feels I'll go ahead and move it up on the list.

Aura - February 13, 2016, 10:10 pm

Fuck this Anime, the feels, I fucking swear. I've been holding so many feelings inside me since December 7th and the final episode made me cry like a little bitch, I can't believe it.

I found this anime great because

Spoiler (Click to View)

You basically get told that Isla is going to die from the start, then go through the entire show thinking she will somehow be able to live.

Then she actually dies.

So the sadness doesn't come from the surprise like Clannad or Angel Beats, it comes from character relationships and your own disbelief (much like Shigatsu wa Kimi no Uso).

I think that is the best way to do a sad anime, but it's harder to pull off.
