Thread: Advice for all regular members

KING - February 19, 2016, 10:17 am

I have seen lots of regular members applying for official groups. 99.7% chances you will not get accepted.

No matter how good your application is. Better to join unofficial group or make your own.

Six Double 0 - February 19, 2016, 10:18 am

I disagree, although you are 100% right on the fact that there's a 99.7% chance that regular members won't be accepted to a group. Just because a member isn't upgraded doesn't mean they can't bring anything to the table. I'm sure you know this.

That is unless you've done something so great like protecting HF members or making a really good thread. As long as it makes you stand out even to a l33t or Ub3r. (From my personal opinion. I'm not a group owner or leader but I believe if a member has done something great it shouldn't matter if they're upgraded or not)

I agree with you. I have seen few regular members with some professional skills but unfortunately they're not given chance to be part of group because they are regular members.

SmileyBear24 - February 19, 2016, 10:22 am

I disagree, yes you're more than right about regular members not getting accepted.

Personally i think everyone should have the right to prove themselves no matter the "Level" you are. Anythings possible, New members could bring something that would impress us all.

Netherless, L33t is really cheap people, i recommend purchasing it if you plan on staying here.

Unfortunately you are correct, although I've only been here for about 2 months now, I have seen a few regular members that have great skill sets. It's unfortunate that you can't really get anywhere in this world today without having money.

Soulmate - February 19, 2016, 10:25 am

I disagree about the unofficial group part, 100% of those are terrible and have no place on the forum and should just be a skype or FB group or something. The regulars should just upgrade to at least l33t because that's where it's at and then go apply

No way Jose. All of our unofficial groups are full of the most HQ hackers who can hack your bank account from 100,000 miles away and get access to Obama's social media while we eWhore some pedo. We are Anonymous. ?

Nex+ - February 19, 2016, 10:36 am

All depends on the group owner :c

Llama™ - February 19, 2016, 10:38 am

I like that 99.7% rate. It's pretty round.

Alice Dee - February 19, 2016, 10:59 am

I don't really understand this at all.

Why do members have to be leet or uber to prove their skills? I'm sure there's many regular members who have much more knowledge than upgraded members Exactly, You never know. It completely depends on the group owner. I have seen many regular members getting into groups.

Duyere - February 19, 2016, 11:16 am

This just goes to show the amount of bigotry group owners/leaders have. I honestly can't blame them though in this case. Regular members often are either LQ or multis. Other regular members have sullied the name for the whole usergroup. I assume this is why l33ts/ub3rs act like elitists when in the presence of regular members, not "because I paid money and you didn't".

I means it's not like regular members don't stand a chance, but unless you're HQ and have lots of posts/rep, then it's not very likely that upgraded members will even acknowledge your existence on this forum. Luckily for my case my existence was known by someone and he decided to upgrade me.

why do you keep putting your posts in a different font and color, this doesn't make you look "special" or "artistic" or "intelligent" u look like a phaggot.

Nex+ - February 19, 2016, 11:42 am

When I invited people into Eternal it wasnt based off awards, reputation, etc. It was based off of what they had documented on this forum as proof in their skills. New members do not have much to show if they just joined, so this could be one logical explanation, however Eternal is invite only so I did not have any requirements for people.

Realizm - February 19, 2016, 12:03 pm

The only reason that Titans doesn't have any regular members is due to the fact that they are so new. Most of the regular members that have applied haven't even been on the forums for more than 1-3months. I'd rather not give a possible multi who wants a nice userbar in order to scam with a chance. If somebody had applied that was 5+ months old, then yeah I would consider them a lot more.

Exactly. They're not given fair chance as upgraded members.

null's never given a fuck, neither has void/l'french voidue, or animefan! or any non shit-tier group.

If they care about whether or not you're upgraded, they should probably just kill themselves, and accept the fact that they are part of the problem, and not part of the solution.

However, you get a special star, because noncancerous groups do care what you post about, so I mean threads like "free giveaway but i promise guyz not buying rep or nothing"

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4628089>

"guaranteed 2 boot u so hard cuz im piggybacking off of other servers"

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=3442694>

"great ebook vouches given to ppl who 5 star all my threads"

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5116291>

And probably even more shit threads that I didn't even feel like searching for, since all of those were in your top 5 most replied to.

Threads like those convince real groups that you don't really add anything either, and to normal members, that is how you don't get accepted. If the group is a legitimate coding group, nobody gives a fuck about what services you run, just know how to code stuff.

There are some regular members who are here from 2008/2009. My point here is that regular members aren't given fair chance as comapare to L33t's or Ub3r's.

Jesus, I remember the times when this wasn't the case.

I used to be in quite a few groups even back when I was a regular member.

webdev77 - February 19, 2016, 3:12 pm

Regular members are accepted into some groups. My advice is make damn sure you have a good reason as to why you should be accepted over the other 100+ people applying.

Catfisher - February 19, 2016, 3:13 pm

I've never seen a regular member that's been signed up for more than 3 months apply or ask about Titans. So these 08/09 members don't exactly add to any statistics for me.

You'd be surprised how many are multi's that get invited into certain groups.. I could name one but I'd rather not have an open discussion on that shit.

In addition to this, Hexi let me into L'appel du Vide way back when I was a regular member with less than 20 rep. He didn't give a shit about pixels, but rather, he saw how I articulated my opinions and arguments in the SRPP forum, which led to my eventual invitation to Void.

So in conclusion, albeit you do raise a valid point that not many regular members partake in groups, I can talk from experience when I say that there are group leaders out there who don't discriminate.

Yeah and he also let me in when I was -30 rep most of the groups are way too pretentious, I mean opening a thread to advise regular users to not bother applying just says it all.

Sidenote;

why has Hexi sold out to the freemasons/illuminati/J3wry ?
was it worth it bro?

There's no harm in having regular members apply for your group, you just might find a rare cat who may or may not fit the bill for your group. One very good example is Null and Dubitus.
