

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Solution To All Scams

Ku Klux Klan - February 20, 2016, 8:21 pm

Deal Disputes

Clearly there's a problem. Accounts are hacked, people get bored, blah blah blah but that's common for most forums. But no forum is anything close to the amount of deal disputes we have here. What surprised me the most, is how much administration accepts it as if it is normal. No banning rule, etc.?

Here's my solution: Leak the IP address of the scammer, but keep him unbanned :). This would discourage most scammers from ever thinking of scamming again. It's not hard to figure out the school/workplace of the user, and pretty much f*ck him over real badly once you have his real IP.

Is there any reason this shouldn't be implemented? Thoughts?

i a m g o n e - February 20, 2016, 8:22 pm

Illegal, omni doesn't even keep personal info anymore

Hunting Rifle - February 20, 2016, 8:23 pm

Users should be more careful. Not admins fault stupid fagg0ts are getting scammed every day.

Zoo - February 20, 2016, 8:23 pm

I don't think staff will ever get involved with deal disputes. It requires a lot of time and often, it can be difficult to verify whether or not a scam even occurred.

Stealth™ - February 20, 2016, 8:23 pm

IPs can be changed easily, and I go to a college with 50,000+ kids, I'll give you my IP for free.

If you're afraid of getting scammed, gtfo of the marketplace or use a middleman.

(Feb 20, 2016 09:22 PM)tl:dr Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Illegal, omni doesn't even keep personal info anymore
Every IP is logged on every post lmfao.

Shoe - February 20, 2016, 8:25 pm

I don't think this is something that staff would do. There's some documentation that says they don't get involved with deals -> posting their IP address would be getting involved. Omni has a name and shame policy for those that charge back on L33T/Ub3r/Ep1c but that's the extent of it I believe. Also, why would it discourage people? If I logged in on my mobile device, I'd get a Verizon Wireless IP and that doesn't do anyone much good. If someone's afraid they'll be DDoSed then they could just do the aforementioned or if they have a dynamic IP, there's little to no concern. How can you fuck them over, even? Just DDoS is all I can think of, it's not like IPs are 100% accurate unless you manage to get the ISP to reveal that information (to the extent of my knowledge).

Edit: people beat me to all of this. :(

Flared - February 20, 2016, 8:26 pm

this will never become a thing lol its up to idiots to not get scammed in the first place once you learn the ropes and know how to not be dumb pretty much you wont get scammed

Ku Klux Klan - February 20, 2016, 8:27 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:26 PM)Diamond™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) this will never become a thing lol its up to idiots to not get scammed in the first place once you learn the ropes and know how to not be dumb pretty much you wont get scammed

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5082798>

Chicken Buff - February 20, 2016, 8:29 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:23 PM)Stealth™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) IPs can be changed easily, and I go to a college with 50,000+ kids, I'll give you my IP for free.

If you're afraid of getting scammed, gtfo of the marketplace or use a middleman.

Every IP is logged on every post Imfao.

100% agreed. It's impossible for staff to handle all the disputes or even figure out who did what anyway

SmileyBear24 - February 20, 2016, 8:30 pm

That would be illegal though?

Personally i don't think this would stop people from scamming at all.

If you don't want to get scammed then use a Middle man, it's by far the safest way to have smooth deals. Of course the middle man would have to be extremely trusted.

Shoe - February 20, 2016, 8:33 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:30 PM)Aeolian Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That would be illegal though?

Could you clarify what part is illegal? Last time I checked, having an IP address and sharing said IP address isn't a crime.

SlaterMLG - February 20, 2016, 8:33 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:21 PM)ChartDice Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Deal Disputes

Clearly there's a problem. Accounts are hacked, people get bored, blah blah blah but that's common for most forums. But no forum is anything close to the amount of deal disputes we have here. What surprised me the most, is how much administration accepts it as if it is normal. No banning rule, etc.?

Here's my solution: Leak the IP address of the scammer, but keep him unbanned :). This would discourage most scammers from ever thinking of scamming again. It's not hard to figure out the school/workplace of the user, and pretty much f*ck him over real badly once you have his real IP.

Is there any reason this shouldn't be implemented? Thoughts? That's fucking illegal you idiot. Are you high?

Yeah let's get legally involved for $5 for a ebook by swatting this kids school or something, TOTALLY RADICAL.

just leave i can't believe you are this stupid. ???

Ku Klux Klan - February 20, 2016, 8:36 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:33 PM)SlaterMLG Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That's fucking illegal you idiot.

Are you high?

Yeah let's get legally involved for $5 for a ebook by swatting this kids school or something, TOTALLY RADICAL.

just leave i can't believe you are this stupid. ???

This post gave me the Zika virus.

BeNT- - February 20, 2016, 8:37 pm

I'm not so sure it's illegal. Omni did similar for people that did charge backs on him.

Anyway it is a dumb idea OP and no chance in he'll it will ever happen.

Cheers.

SlaterMLG - February 20, 2016, 8:39 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:36 PM)ChartDice Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This post gave me the Zika virus. That only affects pregnant women.

So you are a female?

And pregnant?

Wow, did a big black guy blow his load in you?

xVulnerable - February 20, 2016, 8:47 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:22 PM)tl:dr Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Illegal, omni doesn't even keep personal info anymore
Piss him off enough and he'll put your home address (if he has it) on your own sig.

Sakamoto - February 20, 2016, 8:49 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:21 PM)ChartDice Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Deal Disputes

Clearly there's a problem. Accounts are hacked, people get bored, blah blah blah but that's common for most forums. But no forum is anything close to the amount of deal disputes we have here. What surprised me the most, is how much administration accepts it as if it is normal. No banning rule, etc.?

Here's my solution: Leak the IP address of the scammer, but keep him unbanned :). This would discourage most scammers from ever thinking of scamming again. It's not hard to figure out the school/workplace of the user, and pretty much f*ck him over real badly once you have his real IP.

Is there any reason this shouldn't be implemented? Thoughts?

There are things called legal policies.

If it's 100% proof they scammed, without a doubt, all on site, it's general a ban.

Ku Klux Klan - February 20, 2016, 8:49 pm

(Feb 20, 2016 09:49 PM)Winter Fox Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) There are things called legal policies.

If it's 100% proof they scammed, without a doubt, all on site, it's general a ban.

I've just been told that staff do not get involved in deal disputes whatsoever

Mr Kewl - February 20, 2016, 8:51 pm

HF does not get involved in Deal Disputes.

If a members admits scamming onsite, its reportable. Also if accounts are hacked or potentially hacked you can report it as well.

Omniscient - February 20, 2016, 8:54 pm

Your idea is based on the assumption that the IP I have would be helpful to those who are scammed or the overall community in general. I do not agree. Biggest issue is countries with dynamic IPs or mobile providers who assign temporary IPs. There would be almost no real benefit to your idea other than malicious vigilante revenge which I will not condone.