Mr Kewl - February 24, 2016, 2:11 am

So I guess a Certain member I know has been arrested for Fraud involving Cards and BTCs.

Was reading a random article and remember that the Site Escrow.Ms is owned by a HF member.
Profile : J.P Morgan

Meh, he was legit on HF AKAIK and seemed genuine from w/e conversation we had.

So temporarily avoid using <http://escrow.ms> and dealing with his profile. Unsure if he's out or not

Yeah but under pressure he could be opting to give up names/information in the case as I doubt they targeted him as an individual unless he really made something obvious.

While I am not bothered by this, he may be receiving payments from people that are committing fraud - and by agreeing to confess they could give him a lighter sentence.

If this is the case, whether he knew what others were doing or not - he can offer details as to others he has dealt with.

Or... It could be as straight forward as what the media tells us.

There is nothing wrong with failing math, english or any other subject.

Some people don't have the capacity to learn as well as others, you should appreciate the life you have and the way you can absorb information compared to these unfortunate people.

Learn to help, coach, teach and encourage them to better themselves rather than ridicule their misfortunes.

Some of the greatest minds were particularly bad at another subject, usually because they are so intrigued and focused on what they enjoy than what they don't.

They feel as if it's holding them back which only puts them further behind.

Some of the greatest artists were absolutely disgusting at maths for example.

All legally.

Even though crime usually pays more in the short run, it's only one mistake that's needed in order for you to get caught.

I remember that back from when I used to do illegal shit.

I made a single mistake while doing a interview on the largest or second largest(Not sure if DR or TV2 is the largest) TV channel in Denmark, which ended up in me being busted.

Well true that nobody would advertise that he is gonna scam or does fraud. But you can usually spot unusual behaviour/activity to ascertain that someone might end up scamming/fraud. When a person doesn't exhibits any of such traits and yet ends up getting into such a situation, that's when people like us say 'he seemed legit'. Hope this clears some air for you.

You live in India? You could've had it more comfortable paying off the guards ?

Anyways just came here to say welcome back & enjoy your freedom!

Yeah I know but sadly they don't even have FM Radio here in some Jails. I used to Read books (Finished 60+ in my Last 6 months) and Newspapers to spend my time.

Damn.. Yeah I understand that but reading can become quite relaxing when you get into it even though the surrounding may be bad.

Hope there was something worth reading in there. Take your time to appreciate each day on the outside! ?

I did but those fuckers are not honest you can't even expect humanity from them, sometimes you can't get what you want even after giving them money and if they gave it to you someone else will take it back and ask for more money. However Some jails are good. (I've been in 2, Gujarat and Mumbai) and Mumbai one is worst.

Thanks buddy.

Yeah that's true you've got to find the 'right person'. I mean the smartest guards will give what they've agreed upon getting you for whatever amount.

Sad to see other guards playing people though.

You were in Mumbai this time? And you're welcome! What's your plans for the weekend? Anything big? Or just spending quality time with your close ones?

My family used to send me books. I've read Jeffrey Archer, Lee Child, John Grisham, Dan Brown, Harold Robbins, Fredrick Forsyth, Conn Iggulden, Sydney Sheldon, Robert Ludlum and Ayn Rand books.

Actually they are more corrupt then you think, You give them money, they will take it and force you to live in the same shithole. You can't do anything because you are a prisoner.

Copywriter - April 25, 2017, 2:28 pm

Hey, I know its prison and all, but we're there any pretty interesting experiences you could share?

Like how was it like in Fountain Head, what was so bad about the other Prison.

What did they do to you?

What kind of food did they serve?

FountainHead is a Book.

I was in Lajpor Jail Surat, Gujarat For 1 month and Taloja Jail,Mumbai, Maharastra for 1 year. I have spent total 13 Months in prison.

Lajpor Jail doesn't have restrictions, we can watch TV, roam around in Park during our Free hours (Morning 7:AM to 11:00 AM then again at 3:00 to 6:00 PM.) and you can purchase snacks,fruits and salad etc, special Tea daily and getting home food is also easy.

Jail food was not bad but you get it in a limited quantity.

Jail is Clean and there are only 20-25 Persons in single Cell/Barrack

Stainless Steel Utencils

While Taloja jail is like Hell, due to Mafia people. No TV NO FM, No books in library. You can purchase things (Snacks, Soap etc) twice in a month only. Same thing with Fruits. No Salad etc. Food sucks, It's like Half boiled without any spices, so we have to cook it again. Home food is not allowed.

Jail is not clean and there are 50-60 people in single cell.

Aluminium utencils.

You can meet your family members only once in a week. (Same in both Jails)

Ps: They used to serve cheapest Pulses and vegetables according to season along with 3 Roti and 1 cup of Rice, 2 times a day. @10 am & 5pm

Tea in Morning.

Malentor - April 25, 2017, 3:48 pm

I think I must be in jail in order to at least finish one book in my whole life.

Nice to see you back, enjoy your stay.

I have learned a lot, I became more mentally strong and I am more prepared now for tough situations. Prisons can change your life for sure, your perspective gets changed. You start looking world from a new point of view. Your priorities gets changed. Once you loose everything and you get into that state nothing else matters. You don't give a fuck what people say or think about you. You can also find who's your true friend and foe in your tough times.

I was not Involved with Credit Cards, Police accused me of Money Laundering thru bitcoins. That money was carded tho and I was not aware of that.

They found me through Call details. My mobile number was public.
