Thread: [\[TUT\] How to Dox a Minecraft Player](#)

YayHar - February 25, 2016, 8:06 pm

So as we know, Minecraft is a game that people have had trouble Doxing on, but I thought I'd share ways that I have Doxed players.

Step 1. Aliases?

Head over to www.namemc.com and put the players username in there. Most of the time, they have changed their name if their name isn't something like xximabitchxx132. If they have changed it multiple times, you now have multiple aliases of this person!

Step 2. Skype?

We all know that once you have somebodies skype, there are tons of things you can do such as get an IP. What you'll want to do is search all of their previous name changes in the skype search bar and see if they made an account back in the day. Sometimes if you're extremely lucky it'll have their name on it, but mostly it'll just be another alias or at the least you can get an IP.

Step 3. Other sites?

Just search about, not too much to say about this except search. Search previous usernames and make sure to use keywords. For example instead of searching xximabitchxx132 you can search xximabitchxx132 "skype" and you might get a skype!

Step 4. Emails?

Let's say you have the names, but nothing is really coming up, what next? Try putting their old usernames in front of emails like xximabitchxx132@gmail.com. Facebook has a cool feature that if you have an email all you have to do is go to "Forgot Password" and enter the email and it'll give you the fullname of the Victim and maybe even the last 4 digits of their phone number!

Step 5. Scared?

When people get scared, they are a lot more likely to listen to what you have to say. You'd be surprised, actually. Just start listing off what you know about them and they'll get scared. Link them to an IP logger or even a referrer logger and they'll be more likely to click it. They're scared that'll drop their dox if you don't. It makes no sense, but it works from my experience.

None of this is anything new, but some people don't know it so I thought I'd make a thread.

It's extremely easy to do step 5. People are so vulnerable to clicking IP loggers and such on Minecraft. This is how I always start out with a minecraft player dox. Nice guide, though, has some good information.

Step 5 was more or less just an idea slot. Just put it there to give some people that extra motivation to try.

nearly every minecraft player are in db strings somewhere, i have like hundreds of minecraft, runescape, and wow dbs alone.

on topic though, well written and thought out tut. People should be learning these methods earlier it seems these days like online PI has gone downhill when i first started this was the FIRST thing you learned for EVERYTHING you did. Now you have kids who go out and try to card on their home IP like braindead idiots and shit. You should be able to hide yourself/ find/backtrace nearly every one else before you try and do anything

If you have any questions regarding this, I am online.

It looks like these methods can be used for different platforms as well, not just minecraft. In addition, I noticed that finding IPs via skype became slightly harder to do without resolvers. Any suggestions?

Does this do anything for you?
