Thread: [>\[DAExploit\]<| Microsoft Word Exploit | .exe > .doc | No Spoof | Cheap | FUD | Stable](#)

Uiqueblhats - March 2, 2016, 10:48 am

DAEXPLOIT is not like other average Microsoft Word Exploit building service which charges high amount of money for a build and in turn gives a non-stable or public code based exploit build which have low compatibility or are highly unstable for practical uses. My service have simple principle that I will give a manually build high quality build which have much better execution rates and it will work with most Word Versions and will be cheapest keeping affordability of exploit in mind.

Bro, this is Macro please state this on the thread.

eHate - March 14, 2016, 5:11 pm

Guys it's pretty obvious it's a macro, I mean look at the price.. if you want a truly silent non macro exploit you're looking at 400$-2000$.

Also there's no direct link afaik, you just upload it to your email and send it off.

In any case, will this work with LuminosityLink stubs that are crypted in my own crypter?

DamienVC - March 18, 2016, 1:56 am

Isn't it a sketchy move to ignore whether it's a macro or silent exploit?

It's obviously a macro exploit but you're not being specific so you would be making sales off people who mistake this for a silent one (even though it's obvious, certain people fall for it)

Sketchy business tactic, but whatever.

Its macro & will show the prompt before execution. Plus it took you like 13 days to finally state on your own thread that it's a macro exploit

Its nothing sketchy at all i always clarify to everyone before making a sale and anybody in his /her mind know that silent ones are not sold this cheap.

Please dont thread bash, macros are far from outdated and are still very useful.
70% of people will enable macro if you simply say "Enable macro to view the contents of the doc."

Silents are more for higher level corporate espionage.
