

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Weebly

T0ucaNSaM - March 14, 2016, 8:18 am

My friend has a website and a domain name which he got it done through Weebly not knowing that I can web dev pretty good I wanted to know can you just use the domain name from a third party company like weebly??

and just use the domain name on a different hosting service say 00webhost.

??

BanditDev - March 14, 2016, 8:23 am

You should be able to change where the domain points to in the domain settings. When you are there you should be able to create an A record to point to your new hosting.

Sakuto - March 14, 2016, 9:30 am

Look like Weebly is something to let you create your website through drag'n drop, I highly doubt they'll allow you to use their domain.

Vitamin Energy - March 16, 2016, 6:48 am

Yes you should be able to change DNS settings.

The DNS records of any domain purchased through our service can be managed via the Domains tab of your Dashboard.

<https://hc.weebly.com/hc/en-us/articles/201184656-Manage-Nameserver-Records>

focuss - March 16, 2016, 7:01 am

So from what I understand... You want to move a domain name purchased from Weebly to a new host?

Egregious - March 16, 2016, 2:45 pm

In the DNS settings, simply change your A-records to the IP address your web host provided you.

EDIT: Just realized you are talking about using a Weebly subdomain for your own web host. No, it is not possible.