I don't think it's possible in such a small space, but a landscape with a mirror image under it except

I feel like the vibe of the ub is the complete opposite of what it should be.

Yours is cartoony, welcoming, when in reality it should be dark and mysterious.

It's my opinion, but in the end it's up to the grim to decide if it fits his needs so take my criticism lightly.

Using Illustrator you can actually come up with better things and more importantly original. Using stock images is good I use them myself. Unless you just don't work on them enough don't expect your clients to buy it.

I've had clients in past where they want me to edit userbars from their PSDs and AIs and I could see that the designers who made them worked their asses off them and besides using stock images on them they did an amazing job that looked professional and didn't look like copied at all.

Got my point ?

The Header is fabulous, how would the header look as userbar?

also talking about this part.

Amazing concept, but needs more visibility or clarity of your idea.

Gonna ask Doge to remove the top part now.

WTF I was just watching One Piece.

I really love this one reminds me of One Piece, idk why. Doge's ub looks just perfect and unique, unlike other userbars which are plain type if you know what i mean. Idk why you find it not good. Anyways let's see what grim chooses.

Entry #1 looks cool as hell.

Lionheart - March 20, 2016, 8:42 pm

Rushed up the touch-ups to make the deadline. Outside corners are a little bulky. Will fix if chosen.
