Thread: More strict marketplace posting rules + New social media sub section.

I would like to see more strict rules on where you can post your threads, there are separate sections for Ebooks and accounts but they are just posted in the premium sellers section anyway, currently there are 9 Ebooks and 4 Account selling threads on the front page alone.

My second suggestion would be to add a sub section for Social Media programs, which would be for Social media Turboers/Crackers/Bruteforcers/Checkers/Registry bots, these types of threads plus ebooks are flooding the section.

Combined, these threads currently take up half of the front page alone and most of the second page.

Anything can be posted in the Premium Sellers Section, except for stress testing services & non-free accounts.

Your second suggestion seems decent, but I just don't know enough about SMs to know what would fit where.

That kinda defeats the point of the separate section though, doesn't it?

I don't agree with the Social Media programs sub section. I feel like there isn't enough activity for a sub section of it's own.

I disagree, I think it could be a very active section, look at the online accounts section, where a lot of social media accounts get sold, the buyers bay where people ask for all kind of social media things and the premium sellers section where you see all the crackers and checkers.
