Okay, so you expect me to believe that you were the very best that your generation of Navy SEALs had to offer? I highly doubt that. If you were as good as you say you were, i don't think for a second that you would be browsing 4chan. This is mostly a place for jobless neckbeards that still live with their parents, and nerdy high school kids that don't have any friends. It really isn't the place for highly-trained assassins to be hanging out in their spare time. Even if it was, something far worse than a troll being mean to you probably would have set you off a long time ago. What about the slew of gore and child pornography that gets posted here on a regular basis? Isn't that something that deserves a person being hunted down and made to regret their actions? Yeah, you're just not the 4chan type. Sure, there's a wide variety of people that browse here, but you're far from the core demograpic if you are who you say you are (which isn't the case). Even if it were true that you're an incredibly talented soldier, I think all the military disipline would prevent you from getting mad enough to murder some random idiot on the internet. I also doubt that even the best SEALs have a "secret network of spies across the USA". Why would all of the most expansive Big Brother network in the world be willing to help a troubled PTSD-sufferer hunt down some random kid on the internet? That doesn't even make sense. If you're gonna try to scare somebody, make it more believable than "IM A SUPER SOLDIER HURR DURR". You might frighten a thirteen year old who doesn't know any better, but to must of us you just look like a kid with an anger problem and a very active imagination. Hopefully things will be easier for you when your puberty's over. Best of luck with that... kiddo

Obli - April 14, 2016, 10:04 am

So what do I get if I do pay you $6? I do not mean to be a smart-ass, but aside from the userbar, why would I pay $6 for entry to a group that promotes 'helping people' and provides the impression of being 'high quality' despite no actual depiction of such qualities?

Obli - April 14, 2016, 10:57 am

I think that it is pretty petty to leave your own group to allow for an additional buy-in spot.

Serious members wouldn't flinch over $6. They won't bother investing time and efforts in building the group and its reputation as being anything more than a simple $6 userbar.

People should join groups because they want to make a change in their HF experience, for their sake and for the sake of other users, in their specific domain.

Literally all groups who had buy-ins ended up being shit. The typical group has a lounge thread, a move night thread and a big load of circlejerking. And yet, they still survive because of like-minded individuals.

But you? you're bringing strangers together under a single userbar and SF with no privileges or benefits for $6. You can play this much, much more intelligently and STILL make profit. I'm talking 'contests', marketing plans, sponsoring products, product 'lines', shit, even eBooks.

This is bound for failure in everyone's eyes. People are going to regard this group as a joke and treat you as worse of a leader than Astonish was.

You can still undo your mistake, and play it smart. Refund every member their petty, puny $6. If you want advertizing and marketing advice, shoot me a PM.

What exactly do you get out of having only 30 members? Is that when you reach super saiyan

?hoenix - April 14, 2016, 5:46 pm

This group turned out to be a joke, I originally thought that The GRim would do something different with his group and it would stand out among the others. I applied for Nightmare and invested a good amount of time into my private application that I sent to GRim, he replied stating he would allow me in the group if I left ALL of my other user groups, I was naive and thought it would be worth it so I did just that.

I was only in the group for 24 hours before being removed and left groupless with no explanation. I've messaged GRim multiple times asking for some reasoning and he ignored all of my messages. Now only a few days later he's accepting $6 buy-ins. What a shame.

Sakuto - April 15, 2016, 2:14 am

He required the same for the previous member of Specialists, in the end, we all got kicked except his friends he wanted in the group. These same friend who ruined the group reputation by selling fake method (bustabit public script), BH method (public on DW) and eWhorking shit (that was strictly forbidden inside the group).

The ?udge - August 2, 2016, 10:27 am

Well Nightmare has approx 30 members - let's say tops 20 are buyins. $20 * $6 = \120 .

That means grim's getting $120 per week from all the buyins in his group. $$120 \times 4 = \480 . So let's say approx $500 per month. Which isn't bad for "passive" income. Maybe not as much if it was a one-time fee to join but yeah.

Very disappointed to see this type of behavior from a group owner.

#killyourselfscumYou've had multiple scam reports on you, so don't talk down on me.

I've messaged all of the members that I owe money a few days ago when I returned to the forums. One of the claimants of the scam reports ended up exit scamming himself so I donated the money that I owed him to cancer research. I'm working on it.

Now you claimed that my Mom was a whore or what not? Please pull some information on me. What's my Mom's name?

Gotta love how you edited your post to make it look like you didn't just start insulting me for no reason.

I'm working on resolving my reports, just like how you solved all of yours. I take pity on the kids who pay $6 to wear your shitty userbar.

the group, you will have to follow the rules.

I was never informed of any rules though. Just went from being in the group to Bam kicked out w/o warning.

I wouldn't buy a group buyin from grim, he isn't man of his words he breaks his own terms of services. I left the group and lost 100$ due to his threats and violation of the ToS.

If any people are on the wall about buying in, don't be. There is a plethora of things that will inevitably make the prices for spots skyrocket. The members are all HQ af from what I've seen. There are lots of plans for improvement. So the chances of this group just going poof are extremely slim to none.
