Krule - June 9, 2016, 10:34 pm

Good luck to those who are entering into the contest!

As for me, I am posting to enter the contest for a simple reason. Growing up, I live with my father by myself while my sisters were out doing their thing. My dad couldn't be left alone for the simple fact he had seizures. My dad himself throughout his life time has had Quadrouple bypass surgery after his first heart attack, which was something else. My dad was a very kind individual who would give the shirt off his back to anyone, much like the person I am. Later on, He went to the hospital, and they made him sign a waiver that claimed they were not held liable if anything was to happen when they were looking for blockages after his heart attack. He signed, and they ended up running the contrast dye through his system which led to his kidneys shutting down. Not only that, my dad would do dangerous activities that would eventually land him in the hospital. (I.e falling off the house during an epileptic episode) etc. He has had a total of 14 car wrecks, his back was a bust, his legs were a bust, you name it. The man himself was a ticking time bomb. My dad was a former pot smoker back in his teenage years, so he was just smoking to get high and calm down his seizures but he winded down after he had us children. (3 total) So later in my highschool years, I got heavy into pot smoking and was having it delivered to my house, and my dad caught wind of it and was like "You should get me some" So I was like okay, sure. So me and him smoked down. It helped with his pain for the most part but the seizures didn't wind down like they should. There was some strains he would smoke and it would just go ahead and send him straight into a seizure. I remember one time he smoked and went right into a seizure and he was smiling the whole time. Shit was weird, but figuring I was high and stuff I knew how to deal with him. I mean I grew up knowing how to manage my dad in situations like that and times I had to call 911 on him. He has sense then passed away, January 29th of this year. But either or, Am I for or against it? I'm for it for the simple fact it can help out with a lot of whats going on medical wise. The system itself has it registered as a class 1 drug, shouldnt really be classed as that seeing as it has a lot of medicinal usage to it. Cigarettes and Alcohol both DO NOT have medicinal purposes, and can't be used to battle anything. Cigarettes cause cancer, and Alcohol itself can clean out your arteries, but can also destroy your liver in that process. Then you have pills like Hydrocodone and Xanax that both have different purposes when you have pot that covers it all. My personal opinion, I don't like buying my pot off the streets. you never know who had it, what it has on it, if its laced with something or not, whereas if you had medical dispensaries, you could very much go and buy what you want when you want it without having to deal with the fear you might get something laced with PVC or something along those lines. Even though I am against government regulation, the government could tax it, we could free up some prison space for people who ACTUALLY DESERVE to be put in prison, and we could enjoy ourselves the way we want too without the fear of being pent up in a government facility.

Again, OP. Thanks for the opportunity to gain the award, and good luck to those who post to enter.
