It's a shame to see Titans go but I always figured that you would rebrand the group to a Minecraft group. I remember discussing it with you over a year ago but you never went through with it.

Hopefully you'll be able to be active enough to build up the reputation for this group like you did for Titans!

Didn't want to turn into RedLions v2 or let others run my group because I cba to do so myself... which in a way is still RL v2 lol. It will probably return one day when Minecrafters has run it's course in like a year or two ?

Eh fair not to become Red Lions v2 and keep changing the dynamic. Your group and your money, make it what you want to make it, just logging in after a few weeks and seeing it gone to this feels off for me. I'm an old sentimental bastard.

Bringing back HackerCraft was a nice idea, but the server has once again died. And with its current situation I don't feel that the server will be able to recover and I am not putting anymore time or effort into helping it when the help is not wanted. I've been stalking the Minecrafters due to HackerCraft, not wanting to create a server out of conflict and trying to make HC our main point to focus around that brings the group together but sadly most people don't play on the server anymore. So it is time to move forward.

Will most likely be having an activity sweep as well to remove the inactive members.
