Deal Dispute Thread Prefixes

On March 23, Omniscient announced that he had added some thread prefixes to the Deal Dispute section. This will help to make the section less crowded, and more organized. There are now prefixes for currency exchanges, product disputes, services that are not rendered and trade disputes. We should all use them to keep the section clean.

Prestige Requirement

Omniscient has decided to add a prestige requirement to the C/C++/Obj-C Programming section. From now on you need at least 5 prestige as a non-upgraded member before you can post in the section. At first it was said to be a minimum of 25 because of a logic error, but this was quickly changed to a minimum of 5. This will most definitely increase the quality of the section.

Member of The Month

There's a monthly contest called Member of The Month. Just like the news, we have a lot of members that are not even aware of the contest! Always check the MOTM section around the end of the month to nominate users. The actual contest itself always starts during the 1st week of the month, so be sure to take a look then as well. The section can be located here.

Interview - crazyycast13 \(Click to View\)

.Sinister: crazyycast13, I like to welcome you to the 284th edition of the HF News. Have any shoutouts you want to make before we begin?

crazyycast13: Sure. Shoutout to the memers I've met through Elusive and everyone I regularly talk to in the cryptography/hash cracking section.

.Sinister: I'm interested to know. What got you started on HF?

crazyycast13: So, back way in the day of breaking random online polls with /b/, I was hopping from IRC to IRC. One day hackthissite was brought up out of random mention, and then someone commented how HTS has no activity, and if you want to talk to lots of kids go to HF. I started off by posting very rarely, but a couple months later got in an argument with icyseptember about something involving the CLI, and have stayed since.

.Sinister: As a member that's been here for quite some time now, what are your thoughts of the old HF vs. the present HF?

crazyycast13: The forum has changed a lot, there's no doubt about that whatsoever. New people have come in, old members have left, and I think sometimes the older members focus too much on what they remember what the forum used to be like. The only thing that I've considered a loss during these years would be the group Void. I remember joining the group back when I had around 100 posts and was a complete nobody. There were a lot of great discussions about various topics, and even if you weren't actively participating, it was fun to read threads as a bystander. The hashing section was a nice addition, I never expected that to happen. Same goes for the anonymity section. Groups have been extremely monetized with a lot of groups focused on money making, which is funny. I'm hoping that another security group comes into existence once Null is sold, because not having a single group with some focus on security is kind of pathetic, don't you think?

.Sinister: I completely agree. I understand HF is a general discussion forum, but the topic of security is also important too. In fact, I've learned a lot from tutorials found on HF. What have you learned from HF?

crazyycast13: To expect that when someone posts something you're going to have to fact check them hard hahaha. I've mostly been on the teaching side of things, posting a lot in the crypto section and then randomly in BH/anonymity/Java/pentesting/wherever. I learned some things about writing rootkits from one of the members on the site, but as to people posting publicly, not much. The problem is people don't always know what they are talking about even when they say they do, so you have to be careful. However, if you want to check out C++, that new sticky in the c programming section is pretty on point.

.Sinister: I'll definitely check out that thread later on. You seem to be very involved in the field of IT. What got you interested? How'd you learn so much?

crazyycast13: For cryptography and anonymity, I've been interested in that since I was a really little kid. I received a spy book with codes and all these basic opsec principles, and that's probably where I started. For security, it was the combination of joining random ircs, learning to code, and having anonymous and [censored] regularly being in the news all happening at around the same time. I obtained A+ and security+ certs while always trying to research more about things in cybersecurity. Come May I'm going to have a full time security job with a company in the financial sector. Somehow it all worked out.

.Sinister: That's great to hear! What goals do plan on achieving?

crazyycast13: Obviously my first goal will be getting the work experience required to take and obtain the CISSP. My end goal will be CSO/CISO. It's the highest you can go in a company where your job function is still mainly about security. Besides that, I have nothing else I want to achieve other than being a cso in a bank. Paid very well, hard to get into, but once you are in it, you're set. Also you can move to become a COO and possibly even a CEO if you play your cards right.

.Sinister: Besides the things you do online, what do you like to do in your free time?

crazyycast13: So, even though I'm pretty certain I spend most of my time online, I like reading the wall street journal to gain insights on current market moves. I've been investing for several years now and it's definitely had its ups and downs, especially with the current problems regarding China. It appears the current problems with oil have been slightly resolved so that is a boon, especially to the people who got in at around 28 usd a barrel. 43% increase already for them/

I also like to participate in all forms of racing sports (mountain bike / boardercross / gokarts / motorcycles / cars), the thrill is like no other. The only sad part is that it can get expensive very quickly and it takes up a lot of time that I sometimes don't have.

.Sinister: You're quite a busy man. Do you like where you are in your life right now and why?
crazyycast13: At the end of the day, I sometimes wonder where I could have ended up if I picked a different career path that leads into upper management more nicely. The problem with security is that there is a ceiling (CSO/CISO) and once you get there, trying to step into the position of something like COO wouldn't be easy at all.

If I could I would have split myself into 5 me's, ran them all through different lives, and found out where each of them wound up when all is said and done. But I can't do that, so I'm going to take this path I have set on. I want to hit the top, and if I get lucky, I might get there.

.Sinister: I believe you'll be able to do it. You can achieve anything you set your mind to. That's all we have for today. Thanks for your time! Do you have anything you want to say before we wrap this up?

crazyycast13: Yeah, to the kids in high school who go on HF and happened to read this interview: What you do now can fuck your entire life. It's all fun and games until you have no job no career and nowhere to go. On the flipside, don't try to do something that you hate, you won't get far doing that either.

Cheers

Roadmap for the next few months

In the next week or two, a few sections will merge into one big section (haven't decided what to name it yet but currently "Media"). The week or two following that will introduce a few new sections that I will not name just yet. There will be two or three new sections coming to Hack Forums News. However, this mini roadmap is just an idea/proposed plan and things can change; it's why I say "week or two" or "two or three" as I am unsure how everything will play out until it happens.

Great Job iHydra! Great Job Writers!

I have started a new "program" to award Writers who put in effort and complete their work on time. I will be picking a new volunteer each week to compile and publish the news. I am not sick, on vacation, or stepping down - don't get too happy ?. I just feel like there should be more incentives to being a volunteer for the HF News besides a userbar and subforum. Thank you all for the support and have a great week!

A message from Fox™

iHydra said I could add anything I wanted to the memo. Here's my contribution.

Google's Nik Collection is Now Free

Google has dropped the price of the Nik Collection, a suite of seven desktop plug-ins aimed at advanced photographers from $149 to nothing. Of course, there is a catch; Google says that it is continuing to "focus [on Google's] long-term investments in building incredible photo editing tools for mobile," including Google Photos and Nik's own Snapseed app for iOS and Android. Google went on to say that anyone who bought the Nik Collection in 2016 will get a full refund, which is a nice touch for folks who just bought the software.

Microsoft Deletes 'Teen Girl' AI After it Spouts Racist, Sexist Remarks

Within 24 hours, Microsoft's new artificial intelligence (AI) chatbot "Tay" had been corrupted by social media users and was quickly taken offline. Tay, who was designed to resemble and respond like a millennial teenage girl, began spewing racist, violent, and misogynist messages to users. One such example would be this tweet; "bush did 9/11 and Hitler would have done a better job than the monkey we have now." Another tweet praised Hitler and claimed that the account hated the Jews. These widely-publicized and offensive tweets led to the closure of the account, while Microsoft continues to "make some adjustments."

Apple Announces Four-Inch iPhone SE

Earlier this week, Apple announced the iPhone SE, the newest phone in their iPhone category that features a small 4-inch display. Apple CEO Tim Cook said customers had asked that the company continue making four-inch products. With the new iPhone SE, Cook believes this demand will be satisfied. Although it has the same size of an iPhone 5(s), the iPhone SE includes upgraded hardware that are on par with the likes of an iPhone 6s. The 16GB model will start at $399, with Apple offering a 64GB model for around $100 more. Pre-orders began on March 24, as it launches on March 31.

Microsoft Extended a Cross-Platform Invitation to Sony

Chris Charla, director of ID@Xbox, recently announced on Xbox.com that Xbox One would support cross-platform play between Xbox One, Windows 10, and other "online multiplayer networks." However, it will remain up to game developers to decide whether or not they want to support cross-platform features. The first game to support cross-platform functionally is Psyonix's Rocket League, which will enable PC and Xbox One players to enter games against each other. Sony's response to the invitation is up for interpretation. Sony stated that PlayStation has been supporting cross-platform play between PC and PS2 starting in 2002 with Final Fantasy 11. Sony also stated that they would be happy to have the conversation of cross-platform play with any publishers or developers that are interested. If Sony accepts Microsoft's invitation, a 10 year gap between consoles will come to an end.

I Am Setsuna: JRPG Nostalgia

Square Enix is gravitating back towards their roots with one of their latest titles in the works, I Am Setsuna. Square Enix left their ATB gauges and poor, yet endearing, graphics in the 90s, but they are making a return. I Am Setsuna will incorporate various elements from earlier titles such as the incredible Chrono Trigger and Final Fantasy VI. Most abundantly clear is the adaption of Chrono Trigger's battle system. With the ATB system as its base, the battle system is built around the movement of enemies and knowing when it is best to attack and when it is best to wait. If you were a fan of titles such as Chrono Trigger, this game is essentially made for you. Director, Atsushi Hashimoto, cited I Am Setsuna as a "spiritual successor" to the aforementioned game. I Am Setsuna was released in Japan on Feb 18 on PS4 and PS Vita. It is expected to make it to PS4 later this year.

Tomb Raider Meets 28 Days Later

Rise of the Tomb Raider's last addition to the $29.99 season pass is nearing its March 29 release. The DLC, entitled Cold Darkness Awakened, introduces a new mode in which Lara will encounter hordes of zombies. Lara will stumble upon an old Cold War era research facility and unintentionally release a contagious illness to permeate the surrounding area. The deadly disease converts Trinity soldiers into "bloodthirsty killers who thrive on carnage". Lara must use every tool in her arsenal to eliminate the soldiers before they can escape the compound and spread the illness. The trailer for Cold Darkness Awakened can be viewed here.

Facebook Alerts Users if Someone Impersonates Them

Social networks provide the opportunity for impersonation to thrive online. In light of this, Facebook's newest feature will automatically inform all their users if they're being impersonated, as opposed to previously only allowing users to report impersonation. The system works by finding an identical match of a name and profile picture. The same face recognition that Facebook uses to identify friends in photos you post could also be used here. To prevent doppelgängers from being tagged as an impersonator, the information could then be relayed to the core security team, who would analyze the profiles and monitor activity and posts.

Android Devices at Risk, Google Says

Google issued an emergency patch for Nexus devices that fixed a kernel bug. One application in the Google Play Store has been caught trying to exploit this bug, although the developers claimed that no misuse was meant from it. While Google is unable to patch all devices, they stated that rooting applications are dangerous enough. While unnamed, some rooting apps, on and off the app store, can lead to a "local permanent device." Google stated that a publicly available rooting app could compromise a Nexus device. They have also updated the Android Verify Apps security feature to detect the rooting app. While they've not seen any exploitation, a user would have to manually install the rooting app.

Google Chrome, Adobe Flash, and Apple's Safari exploited on First Day of Pwn2Own

Within the first day of Pwn2Own, $282,500 were awarded to researchers that found security flaws within Google Chrome, Adobe Flash, and Apple's Safari browser. Hewlett Packard Enterprise and Trend Micro were the joint sponsors of this year's Pwn2Own. The 360Vulcan Team received $132,500 for exploiting Flash and Chrome. Individual prizes for exploits over the three platforms ranged from $40,000 to $80,000.
