Thread: Should you do answer to people when is not the answer they want ?

Mr_Bot - March 29, 2016, 3:45 am

Bro i have some kind of problem of "negative reputation" given two time.
I have a service coding opened on HF.

All these negative reputation happen when i answer to offer who want negociate a price and said no i couldn't.

Then they just -rep.

What the hell ? I didn't scam me, i though is better to no lower price that give low quality code or not functional program, but always thinked he was a good idea to go back to them and said "no he will cost that and can't lower".

Most of people don't see the problem.
Other see act like Kid and then -rep.

Should i just no answer to them for avoid that ?
Thanks, and sorry for bad english i writte this quickly.

If people can't take an answer to a question they have asked, regardless of whether they want to hear it or not, then they're just immature and the -rep shouldn't affect you too much.

Depends. If you don't want alot of hate just avoid the conversation. Neg reps, however dumb the reason for it may be, almost always are the result of a disagreement of some sort.

If you don't want neg rep, just don't start an argument which won't gain you anything anyways.

Not all UB3R's are bad you know?

This. People get mad at rejection. Just don't even reply.

ur a 12 year old fuck if you cry about rep rep is just a number, the comment behind the rep matters the most.

anyways just tell your honest answer
