How The Education System Is Designed To Create Loyal Slaves

Hi there, I thought that this thread was necessary as there are many people within this forum who are still quite young and in school.

However, do not take this thread as something that is saying "Quit school, it is a waste of your time", because it isn't and you can still learn some very valuable lessons there, such as social skills, mental mathematics, and many more.

However, the issue I am addressing is how the education system is designed in order to create loyal slaves, and how you should change your mindset and turn a blind eye to the indoctrination that is going on behind the scenes.

Okay, done with the introduction...

First of all, the education system is designed to create employees, in order to place you inside of this circular world so you are unable to actually get anywhere. It is designed to make you obedient, obedient to the government. The education system makes people fearful of failure, and turn away from the face of failure, which results in people being fearful when it comes to starting their very own business ventures and what most people don't realize is that failure actually leads to success.

The slavery machine, disguised as the education system uses this new model of slavery; we have gone from the traditional chains, where they are readily apparent, to this new form of slavery. You must realize an employee is a fancy word for a slave, and if you enjoy your slave work, then that is good for you, but there is always something better that you wish you had, right?

Well allow me to tell you that you can have whatever the fuck you want, as long as you're capable of breaking out of the chains and becoming an outsider looking in when it comes to education and working for others. I follow a system that has been proven time and time again to work, and that is "if you can conceive it, you can achieve it", and it basically means that whatever you think about with the strongest emotions, is what you will attract, be that good or bad.

And that is all I have to say today on this topic folks, I hope this was an enjoyable read, and I hope that you took something useful from it. For those interested in my way of thinking, here is a great video to bring you up to that level as you take your first step on the path to success.

And that's why you gotta work hard to be your own damn boss and not someone's slave. ?

Alan Watts talks about how our society conditions children to live with a constant frustration and worry about the future, and never learn how to live in the present.

Just something to add to your thread.

I asked my so called "friend" at school what he wants to do during and after college. He simply said "work for someone". I am no longer his friend and reunited with a very old friend who wants to be "the man" as do I (be their own boss).

Shit, what a fucking solid thread this is. For once in my life I'm regretting not being 1337 for my inability to rep you for such an angelic post.

Keep it up brother, question everything and fulfill your true potential ::DDD

You stopped being friends with someone because they were happy working for someone?

Well other factors included as well (rude, etc) but yes, it was the leaf on the mountain that caused it to collapse.

Like minded people are key.
