Use BitURL with ShareX, use the image config and tutorial is available here

OUT OF BETA!

How can I see how many people click on the link?
Just simply add "+" sign after the URL.

How can I see where the shortened URL goes before clicking on it?
See above answer.

What image format do you support?
I currently support PNG, JPG and GIF

I accidentally shortened something I don't want people to have access to, how can I remove it?
PM me with the code and I will review it. Ex: "https://biturl.io/ABCD" ABCD is the code.

I only want certain people to use the shortened link, how can I do that?
Simply go to password and enable it and enter a password and share it with people you wish to have access.

I wish to have my own code for the shortened URL.
No problem! Simply head over to custom and enable it, enter a custom code and if it's not taken it will be yours!

Will my shortened URL ever get deleted?
Yes, every month it automatically removes links OLDER than 1 month AND has 0 views.

Is the Steam login safe?
Absolutely! None of the logins is performed on my server, all is done via the Steam server, I'm only retrieving your Steam ID.

I wish to use this in my application, any API available?
Yes, in HTTPS form, check here.

Do you have an application for screenshots?

Yes, both screenshot and URL shortener is available in an application.
Download it here. Image uploader config and URL shortener config. You'll need an API key which you can get here, Account->API Key.

Extended Question Above: Jeez, that's complicated, you got a video for it?
Yup, click here.

I have an idea for you!
Great! PM me about it and we could work something out.

I found a bug!
Oh no, please PM me with steps to reproduce it

This is really nice, going to use it.
I have one suggestion.
Add a Kappa on the bottom left corner of the website.

wat. This just creates dead links with literally no benefit. It doesn't take any space to store thousands of [code, redirect_url] pairs (like ~10MB per 100k).

You'll be surprised how much space it took up my for IP logger; dead links(0 views) are already dead, removing them makes room for alive links. Also, my table has way more columns than a simple code and redirect_url.

Really awesome looking site.

I asked this on the other person's URL shortener thread but wanted to see what your answer was - how do these URL shortening sites primarily generate revenue? I know bit.ly charge a large monthly fee to have your own custom branding. What are other alternatives?

Thanks and good luck!

I don't do not generate any revenue, nor do I plan to. It will always remain ad-free. Programming is just my side hobby, I do them for fun.

My problem with your service: In order to have an "Account", you must sign in with your Steam account?

Absolutely NOT. No offense. It's more so about keeping accounts separate.

Will you be implementing a user signup db of some sort, without linking through Steam or any accounts ?

Highly unlikely, if I were to consider it'd be on my low priority list. Plus, using Steam integration is more secure, 2FA provided by Steam. All login is performed using Steam; you'll be redirected to Steam official site. If you don't trust me, log in at Steam website first then come back and log in, it will ask if this is you.

I'm sorry, It's not you that I don't trust. I trust the service, and like the idea, I'm already using your service actually. Great idea and I think you should charge for a premium type service. This is legit.

I'll consider premium features, but as for the account. Until I get a server with unlimited storage, I won't implement a separate sign up system.

A Powerade - April 18, 2016, 11:02 am

Your website looks pretty good.

Things I like:Nice design

Quick redirection

Steam account integration works well and link tracking is great.

Things I don't like:Confusing UI: the tabs make it confusing as to what to do at first look. Maybe make them be different sections on the page instead of tabs?

CSS on results section makes the text hard to read when mousing over it.

Overall, it's a good website.

Vape Nation - April 18, 2016, 11:29 am

Since Skype will be releasing a brand new SDK for their platform, I'll be integrating both image uploader and URL shortener as well

?Eatos - April 26, 2016, 5:59 am

Nice script but you are missing some important things there.

First of all, the jquery validation. I entered "aaa" as URL and it gave me a short version of it. You have to be sure that the input entered is an actual URL. You could use the jquery validation plugin for this purpose, it's great and really easy to use.

Secondly, why do you have to use a toggle switch for the password and the custom alias? Just leave them enabled as optional and check if they were empty or not when your form was submitted.

Also, why don't you use the google API to generate the QR code? It's just one line of code (e.g. <https://chart.googleapis.com/chart?chs=152x152&cht=qr&chl=YOURLINKHERE>).

Finally, you could improve the design of your website and add some more features like statistics, recent links, user accounts etc.

I just finished a similar project some days ago btw.

RumbleFrog - April 26, 2016, 8:04 am

(Apr 26, 2016 05:59 AM)?Eatos Wrote: CITE snip

Not going to add validation, this is not only for URLs but other that's triggered by browser.

I use toggle as it returns a Boolean and won't need check for empty and cleaner since I use it to change opacity of inputs for focus point. Boolean also used for my object upload to my remote server.

My own API is faster than requesting a remote API, I want this system to be self sustaining no outside resource.

There's already statistics if you check the FAQ, account is just how I like it.

I'm not going to add recent links as I want privacy and also it contributes to how my crontab works.

No ads.

SSL/HTTPS encrypted. Very good trust factor man. Props for this!

CONTRAOnly Steam login.

No contact informations except Hackforums Profile link.

WEBSITE ANALYSISDomain-WHOIS is protected by "WhoisGuard".

Easy domain name.

No AdSense

No Google Analytics.

Keywords: "Code URL,shortener,image,uploader,password,protection,custom,branding"

Images directly in root folder. No /img/*.

ALL IN ONE

This Website looks nice is very simple and is not tracking you. It provides much options and is great for shortening (if this word even exist..).

It's not very known so users might not click on a link shorted with it. But most will do it. I searched the whole Source code and there wasn't any exploit/attack against the users.

So you got a vouch from me :)

Its a good site the only problem is Cloudfare verification.. I can't send people to a link where they have to do verification which is annoying and making my conversions less. Anyway good site, I know its important for you to deal with DDoS using CF but a url shortnerer shouldn't discourage people to visit the site.

Disguise links with extensions is available; simply add an extension after the shortened URL, ex: <https://biturl.io/google.exe> is interpreted as <https://biturl.io/google>

Image hotlinking is back for those that require extension after it.

I supported the following extensions

- png

- jpg
- exe
- gif
- psd
- txt
- csv
- mp3
- mp4
- wma
- avi
- apk
- jar
- html
- php
- js
- ico
- zip
- rar
- iso
- torrent

If your concern was storage then allowing mp4 will be far better than allowing gif because 10mb gif file with better quality can be 200kb with x264 encoding. This is why I never record anything as gif.
