Thread: C# How to display the animated GIF image in WinForm Application

LogicGeek - April 14, 2016, 11:52 am

The title says everything, if anybody can help you can post here or PM me.

Thanks in advice.

Best Regards LogicGeek!?

Literally the first Google result. Seriously you'll need to learn to search and read documentation yourself if you are ever to move past basic programming...

Your english i quite good don't worry about that.

Have you tried following ?

- Drop a picturebox onto your form.
- Add the .gif file as the image in the picturebox
- Show the picturebox when you are loading.

When you tryed that and that didn't work , post here with more details on what didn't work so that we can help you more specifically.

EDIT :

Where did his reply go ^^ ?

Use picturebox item for that, good luck.

Vicci - April 16, 2016, 5:55 pm

Why not use the PictureBox? It's located in the tool box.
