Thread: Anti-Twenty Dollar Change Official Online Petition

RainSpider3000 - April 20, 2016, 8:28 pm

So I want to see how many supporters we can get for this, I have seen a lot of people here on HackForums complaining about how they would never want to even touch a 20$ bill with Harriet Tubman on it.

What she did was right, but she really didn't do too much other stuff. She did help free slaves, but she just happened to be mentioned in a lot of stories and gained fame.

We have created a petition here:

<https://www.change.org/p/the-true-sons-and-daughters-of-america-don-t-put-harriet-tubman-on-the-20-bill?recruiter=530476283>

Sign the petition and let me know what you think!

I also think this might start more "racial conflict" if they start printing those... I don't want that to happen either. All is for the best.

I support this petition. Send all stupid 20$ bills to me, I'll burn them down

Robin Williams - April 20, 2016, 8:52 pm

4th person to sign. fuck tubman.

?aba Yaga - April 20, 2016, 8:54 pm

Just curious what did Andrew Jackson do that was so changing within the world?

Also putting her on the front is just a slap in the face to blacks

Ordium - April 20, 2016, 8:55 pm

Why can't we put Harriet Tubman on the $20 bill?

It'd only be worth $12 then.

A Powerade - April 20, 2016, 9:00 pm

How will putting a black person on a bill start racial conflict? I mean, as long as this country isn't full of racists then we won't have to worry about that problem, right?

he did what no other president has done before,

owned slaves and killed native americans and yup at the last sentence. would rather she just not be on there at all if andrew is going to be on the back. total paradox edit: i learned the first sentence from my multitude of history classes, not google like u newbz

V?rt - April 20, 2016, 9:14 pm

Sure, then let's add Betty Crocker to the $100 while we're at it. Bills are for people who've made a contribution in our country as a whole, which I understand she did, but Andrew Jackson was also a president and handled foreign affairs. I believe that bills are for people who made bigger contributions. Like, that dude Ben Franklin flew a fucking kite with a key attached to it and got the piss shocked out of him and was like "oh this is electricity" without that dude there probably would even been any bills.

So a runaway slave going back into slave states to free other slaves isn't a big contribution nor a significant part of our history?

Read my post again, I said

"Bills are for people who've made a contribution in our country as a whole, which I understand she did, but Andrew Jackson was also a president and handled foreign affairs."

I know she made a big contribution to our country, I just personally believe that everybody else who is currently on the bills have made a bigger contribution. I don't think they should take someone off of a bill to be replaced, but I'd be fine with the making of a new bill, or possibly like a different version of a $.50 piece.

Wings of Redemption - April 21, 2016, 1:03 pm

Please do some research! He will not be completely removed from the bill. He will just be moved to the back of the bill and she will become the main face of the bill.

That is another major reason for this not to happen. That's being racist though really... That's like moving the whites to the back of the bus.

Marketplace Buyer - April 21, 2016, 4:05 pm

I chuckled when you said Harriet Tubman didn't do much for America during the slavery conflict.

You do realize Andrew Jackson was the one who didn't learn from Christopher Columbus and signed the Indian Removal Act?

Pleb.

Lol?

You just compared putting a white man on another side of a bill to African Americans being forced to the back of a bus. Two totally different things, first off.

Second, this comment is more racist than that...

Is this thread a troll? Am I being trolled?

Past the politically correct plebs who think that everything must pass their views, I don't think that anybody is in favour of this change. Definitely not enough for civil uproar, but definitely a +1 to Americans' bucket list of why they hate the government.

I heard they are changing the $5 too and adding civil rights shit on the back... Why? Why is that needed? And why is all this happening while Obama is in office?

Give me some sources for that.

I would agree that seems a bit much...

I don't mind change, just not when everything is being changed for seemingly no reason.

Don't get me wrong or racist or whatever, I am not American nor I know how it is there but, is this seriously a big problem? Changing the face of someone on the money? Not like everyones looking at the face on that piece of paper before giving it to the cachier, drug dealers or whatever.
