Thread: View Own Username History

Odus - April 24, 2016, 1:20 pm

Minor suggestion, you don't get to see changes made >6 months ago when you visit your own username history page. It would be nice if we could and wouldn't be difficult to implement (I think).

Even adding:

PHP Code

```
<?php
```

```
($mybb->user['uid'] == $mybb->input['uhuid'])
```

To the staff check before deciding the query should do the trick.

I like this idea. Would be nice.

I don't see the point of this. But I guess some ppl would use it...

I don't wanna look at list of my previous usernames when I'm fine with my current name.

It used to be like that, then Omniscient changed it (pretty sure). So I'm assuming he won't add it back.

This would actually be kinda nice. Even though I only have a few changes.
But would be a nice feature indeed.

I support this :)

This could also help some Marketers see who they are truly dealing with

Couldn't see anything about that on the announcement thread. Link:

It's not making everyone's public, only making your full history visible to you as well as staff.

Omniscient - April 24, 2016, 2:31 pm

I prefer to not do so because members would be confused what other members would view.
