Most of the Faucets within this Rotator requires XAPO!

I'm trying to update this Rotator twice per week.

A Faucet is not working... what now?

At the Rotator website you can find my e-mail address, please send me a message if you encounter any problems or send me a PM on HF!

The Rotator is not loading!1!!!1

This is totally possible, just wait a few minutes and reload the page.

I own a Faucet and I want to add it to the Rotator.

Please send me an e-mail, you can find my e-mail address at the web-page or send me a PM on HF!

I do not own a Faucet, but I know some good ones!

If you know a Faucet that isn't already in the list please send me an e-mail or a PM on HF!

Are you frequently updating this Rotator

Yes, I am! I'm trying to update this Rotator twice per week. This includes; new faucets; removing broken faucets and adding new features.

UPDATE! - 09/05/2016

Changed the order of the rotation a little bit.

Site is full of ad's with the amount of ad's on that site no wonder he makes so much and the Bitcoin payout is hella low so this noob will have made at least $50 when someone makes $1 off his site in Bitcoins.

I think you do not know the meaning of a "Bitcoin faucet ROTATOR"

I do not own any of the faucets within the rotator. I only provide a rotator so it is easier to do a lot of Faucets without leaving (my/a) website.

There is only one advertisement on the rotator it self, and that one is only visible before you press "next" site. After that I do not run any advertisements.

Edit: So please do not trash talk my service if you do not know what it is about, thanks in advance.

Hmm. I should make an automated rotator.

I have a fully auto bot for one btc faucet (custom made). I heard there might be a way to bypass ReCaptcha. Obviously there's the paid decaptcher service, but maybe there's a bypass that doesn't require a service. If so then I will look in to making a fully automated bot.

When is the Bot coming out?

CheesyBread - August 1, 2016, 7:14 pm

The only bot I have has to remain private since it only works on one faucet and not a ton of faucets.

The problem is that the bot has to handle each and every faucet, and every faucet is different in terms of which http requests to make, sometimes the captcha system is different, etc. It's just too problematic.

It is indeed a hard task. But a lot of Faucets are using the same script so it is possible.

can I use my bitcoin address from blockchain?

John Watson - August 8, 2016, 1:25 pm

I don't see a reason why people are giving faucets and faucet rotators a go. Are people really so hopeless as to sit down for over an hour, copy-paste their bitcoin addresses, filling Captchas and clicking buttons to get half a cent?

It would make sense if there were like 500-1000 standard faucets inside a faucet rotator and a bot to automatically do all the captchas, the filling etc. You could make hundreds per day with this way but since there is no such bot then why bother.

Exactly this. You don't make any usable amount of money and you just end up wasting your time. The only way to make money with faucets is to get a shit load of referrals or just use a bot.

A faucet rotator automatically takes you to different faucets to save time and maximize profit. But like I stated in a previous post, you won't make any real money, even with faucet rotators unless you have a decent bot.

OP: When the bot is done, will this site be fully automatic?

The Bot:

A lot of people are wondering when my Faucet BOT will be completed, I can say; it is completed. There are only some problems with it. It works as a extension in Chrome and an external application that you have to run on your computer. At this point most of the Captchas are done automatically. But! There is one downside, while testing something triggered an anti-cheat system or something. A lot of Faucets ban you; when you are using this bot. That's why Im not giving it out yet once I know how to fix this I will be giving this bot out for FREE! Development of this bot will be dead for a while; since I have to focus on school pretty heavily right now. So give me time.

It really depends since a bunch of Faucets have different chances for different prices. For me it takes around 15 minutes to do all faucets, if I wanted to have optimal profit I would do it every hour.

I think that you can get around $1,00 with one ride. But again, it depends.

A NEW ERA... - December 21, 2016, 11:07 pm

I think that you can get around $1,00 with one ride. But again, it depends. Well fuck, thats actually pretty decent. I'll look into it

UPDATE! - 29/12/2016

Removed 1 Faucet due possibly infecting users.

GodlessOlympian - December 28, 2016, 3:54 pm

I'm a bit confused since I never learned about faucets. What exactly is going on here? Why am I getting paid anything?

Sorry for the n00b question. Curious about this because I could then technically script in python a program to open up my chrome browser and go through the entire 'cycle' once every hour.

That's exactly what you can do. You get paid by them because most of the times the faucet owner puts a lot of advertisements onto the site because of that you can get paid.

So basically, faucets are sites that have an ad or ads on it, site owners pay your per view/visit of these ad types and pay you in btc.

So it's clickbux but paid out in btc.

Yes, but then you get paid more and different prizes, if you are lucky you can get more from a Faucet, since they work with winning rates.

This is still fully functional and working! I have intentions to work on the design tommorow, since it is ugly as hell.

It just redirects you to a new faucet once you are done on the old one. Hence the name: "rotator".

Just one question.

You hide the urls.

Are u using the referral method on all sites included in your rotator?

I'm not hiding the URLs, well not intentionally. Yes, these links are my referral links.

Just enter your bitcoin address, and complete the captcha, once you are done, click the NEXT SITE at the top bar to go to the next faucet. There are a lot of advertisements on the faucet websites, do not click on the advertisements, some might be a scam.

Frankey - February 18, 2017, 1:33 pm

I've got a message from a user requesting me to check some non-working/fraud faucets and potentially remove them from my rotator. I'm currently doing this. I will release this important update tomorrow. I feel that I've put too much effort in the back end of the site and not enough effort in the actual content.

I will try to balance content and backend. For now: feel free to message me when you have a bug or a feature request.

I can't remove the ads. They are from the Faucets.

That's not it. You added ads to the rotator itself. That makes it extremely slow for the user and majority of the time your rotator crashes the browser due to being extremely slow.

There is only one advertisement from me and that's the Hostinger banner. Which is only on the first page.

Frankey - March 10, 2017, 2:51 pm

Added ~10 New Faucets. Not sure how much exactly.
