Thread: LANC v2 \(Custom version of LANC\)

Lor?d - May 4, 2016, 9:42 pm

I don't know where LANC originated from but for a while now the geolocation hasn't been working. That's what pushed me to do this the most.

I ended up making my own version of LANC. I fixed the geolocation API, removed a few things, added a database browser, and added a few things in a context menu.

I'd like to hear thoughts on this.

any idea on why the geo location doesn't work every time? It was working the first time and hasn't worked since

Lor?d - May 8, 2016, 5:58 pm

(May 8, 2016 05:35 PM)Supreme_ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) any idea on why the geo location doesn't work every time? It was working the first time and hasn't worked since

If you click stop then the geolocation will not update.

Although I do believe there was another issue with it and I fixed it but I don't know if I put up the new dl link. I'll check it all now.

Posted a new dl. See if that fixes it.

It's a packet sniffer basically.

Most commonly used to grab other player's IPs on Xbox Live or PSN.

YsBk Dervint - May 9, 2016, 7:36 am welp it was fun hogging tons of money off a custom lanc while it lasted, but me being done in this scene i guess is a good enough reason for it to be released as i dont care anymore.

here's a few more ideas btw...

Feel free to contact me if you want any new ideas or code for it, im pretty experienced and have been working on it since 2014.

i kept the same layout, i did think about doing a complete re-design but was too lazy, i also added an ISP column in the connection list

'Suicide - May 9, 2016, 7:40 am

WinPcap does not work in some builds of Windows 10 correctly. Additionally, WinPcap cannot capture 802.1Q tagged VLAN headers received by NDIS 6.x NICs in Windows 7, 8 and 10

This will still need WinPCap. It should work just fine as long as you have .net framework 4.5 installed.

I am 100% positive there is no rat in this.

I will be releasing the source after adding a few more things.

I included a virus scan in the original post.

Edit: If you want you could even go ahead and decompile it. It's not obfuscated. Anyone with basic coding knowledge can look through it and see there's no rat.

It works just fine.

It uses the same base code as the original LANC so if ARP Spoofing isn't working it's something to do with your computer or network.

jordanslaven19 - May 26, 2016, 4:00 am i downloaded your custom version of lanc but ARP spoof still wont show up any help would be great, IARP spoof was working and then just stopped.

thanks.

Ashamed - May 27, 2016, 1:21 am

I was hoping this would fix the issue i have with LANC. But unless im on .net Framework v4 i cant enable ARP Spoofing, well i can but it never pops up. If im on v4 then it pops up no problem. I just actually had it working on v4.5 for the first time ever but i had to restart PC then its back to not working. Any ideas? Great post btw.

Make sure you're on the right network adapter.

Try putting source IP in dest IP.

I doubt the owner of that site would like me making a program to automate hundreds to thousands of requests.
If I could get the back end source that actually grabs the XUID then I could most likely make something myself.
I don't like using 3rd party websites to rely on and i'm sure they don't like it either.

All of a sudden my lanc does not show when I tick apr spoof it does not give me the option to select the ip addresses.

Any help?

It should still work. I'm not sure why but sometimes people have issues with ARP spoofing working.

I've never been able to figure out why.

Make sure you have the C++ Redistributable pack and WinPCap installed.

As far as I know with the ARP spoofing I believe it's an issue that occurs with any OS higher than Win7.

If you're on windows 7 fully uninstall then reinstall the following things:

<https://www.winpcap.org/install/>

<https://www.microsoft.com/en-us/download/details.aspx?id=3387>

and

<https://www.microsoft.com/en-us/download/details.aspx?id=30653>

Thanks, I am on Windows 10 unfortunately. ?

It is weird because it was working fine before (On Windows 10) but one day I tried to use LANC and the APR spoof stopped working :/

Yeah I'm not sure what causes it.
It's happened to me too.
I was using it on win7 fine one day then the next ARP spoofing won't work.
I wish I could help.

in windows 7 lanc used to get information using the command prompt menu, but now in windows 10, they changed the route to get to the cmd menu. so, in the script you'd need to redirect the coding to the new location of the cmd command.

I don't think that's how it works.
I haven't seen anything referencing CMD or CMD scripts in the source.

I can't seem to think of anything else. I know how I fixed cain to work with windows 10 but it didn't fix lanc. The only clue I have left for lanc is that I know that something is wrong with the Microsoft Network Adapter.

So was there a fix?

Also sometimes when I used to check apr spoof my Internet would get kicked.

For example On FIFA (ps4) it would boot me straightaway.

I am on sky broadband if that helps.

Is there a fix to prevent apr spoof kicking your own Internet?

Cheers

I'm not sure what you mean by fix. This is my version of the original LANC tool.

Don't know how to help you with the disconnecting man.

I must've missed it if there were posts about this already, but is anyone else having the problem where it just won't start at all? I've tried extracting it into it's own folder, and running as admin. Any fixes?

Check your firewall settings, not only on your pc also your router. Could be a port being blocked that lanc utilizes, it could also be a possibility your wireless card drivers are a newer version that lanc doesn't utilize, Good Luck.

If you pulled more than 150 IPs a minute it will ban you.

Go to www.ip-api.com/docs/unban and put in your IP.
