Thread: RAT portforwarding problem

DMK Ovidiu - May 16, 2016, 5:52 am

Hey, I can't seem to get the port reading, I tried everything.
Check my pictures.

Is the IP adress your local computer one from IPv4 in CMD: ipconfig?

Edit: <https://i.imgur.com/Uj0HePF.png>, it has to be your IPv4 you are portforwarding, not your external.

It's IPv6 what can I do about this.

Yeah, make sure you are port forwarding your ipv4 that's showing 2 lines above your default gateway in your CMD.

Also make sure your firewall is off (on your pc) and take a look at the firewall settings on your router, every now & then you have to make an exception there too or it won't work.

Can't figure it out? Click on my sig or send me a PM. ?

Change it to your IPv4 adress. Type in ipconfig in cmd and locate your IPv4 address. Alternatively go to Network and sharing settings on Windows and click the "connections: Ethernet". Click settings, then enable IPv4 if you haven't yet, double tap it and change to static IP so you're sure you have the right one.

Edit: Disable your firewall on windows and on your router, if it works now then it's security settings, make an exception on windows firewall and maybe on your router too.
