Even though I don't meet the first requirement I still ask you to let me participate in the trial. I've got a good PC with several virtual envs and will be really helpful. I could link my nulled account for credibility (Lucifer) but its down now. Here's my HWID anyhow if you consider me

Thanks for allowing me to participate in the beta testing. I received my copy and did the basic examination of the logger and everything seems to be working as of yet. Will be posting updates soon.

Edit: 10/35 Detection rate is very decent, but Microsoft Defender was able to detect it runtime. Please PM me your skype to make our communication easier.

Edit2: This is very strange. I played with settings and detection went down to 3/35. Defender isn't able to detect it anymore too. However, I received a blank email as logs, so I don't know what's it up to.

I understand and agree with what you said, but I noted the low detection rate which is pretty good. I can't PM you and I don't want to write my skype here so could you PM me yours?

Added. Waiting you to come online, got a report for you.

Honest Review to Devil Recovery

Thanks for the Beta copy of Devil Recovery, an advanced password recovery tool. Here is my honest review about the Theme, Features, Functionality, Stability.

Theme: 10/10

Pretty user-friendly and clean graphical user-interface. Well structured and everything at its place.

Features: 8/10

It's feature rich but I'm honest, some recoveries did not work as expected. But this is beta and just trial.

Would be nice to see a customizable logs style (Plain Text/Raw/HTML)

Functionality: 7/10

I've tried to recover all my browser passwords (IE Explorer, Chrome, Firefox) and all other supported third-party applications. Well, it just recovered Firefox and FileZilla successfully. It could not recover all other browsers tho (probably because it's a limited test version, idk)

Logs computer information fine, melts itself aswell.

Used outlook-smtp to recover the passwords (TLS)

Logs are clean structured and easy understandable.

The stub has a .NET v2.0 dependence and get's obfuscated when building.

The author didn't really use external software to recover passwords. As the author mentions, it's a pure code stealer so far, I can confirm it.

Stability: 10/10

There is nothing to say, the stability is fine. Receiving the logs without issues.

Conclusion

All in all, I can vouch for this Stealer. It's currently an unfinished project but works fine so far. It's feature rich, stable and secure (sensitive data is encrypted)

Do not hesitate to buy when Devil starts selling it.

I am fully satisfied.

I really appreciate the beta copy you sent to me, here are some of my unbiased impressions of the Devil Recovery!

UI & CREATING STUB IMPRESSIONS

*UI look quite stunning, easy to navigate, and features enumeration is painless to comprehend.

*I noticed some few typos in some field labels in the program as shown in the following screenshots. <http://prntscr.com/b7fjvw>

*I am not professional programmer but the hint words are suppose to disappear when you click the textbox, some fields still keeps their hint when you click them.

*No SSL(yes/no) option in email credential setup, for people with email setup that does not support SSL.

*I think there should be a predefined timer option where recovery can report at a specific time interval.

*It's most lightest in stub size of every stealer or keylogger i have ever used, just at 104kb for the stub i tested.

FEATURES IMPRESSIONS

*Wow! this is the only logger/stealer that i have used in recent time and recovery works flawlessly, stole from all of my browsers and thunderbird, the stealer feature is second to none.

*I can't even find it running in my system process, i will like to know how this works, does this just steal, and terminate process or maybe send recovery at a later time?

*The stability of the Devil Recovery is very solid.

ADDITIONAL FEATURE SUGGESTION

*We could really use the implementation of true keylogger in subsequent versions of Devil Recovery, everything else is superb!

_Devil - May 23, 2016, 11:49 pm

Code *I noticed some few typos in some field labels in the program as shown in the following screenshots. <http://prntscr.com/b7fjvw>Already Fixed ?

Code *I am not professional programmer but the hint words are suppose to disappear when you click the textbox, some fields still keeps their hint when you click them.I really like users like you, who test out things very well and report back, Issue will be look into.

Code *No SSL(yes/no) option in email credential setup, for people with email setup that does not support SSL.will try to implement it by next Update ?

Code *I think there should be a predefined timer option where recovery can report at a specific time interval.Its a stealer and it only send 1 email as it gathers all Login details.
time interval is not useful here.

Code *It's most lightest in stub size of every stealer or keylogger i have ever used, just at 104kb for the stub i tested.Its actually 78KB , but i added some extra stuff in Beta version so it 104kb for beta version ?

Code *I can't even find it running in my system process, i will like to know how this works, does this just steal, and terminate process or maybe send recovery at a later time?It hardly needs 30 second to recover all info and send Email. then it closes itself ?

Code [b]ADDITIONAL FEATURE SUGGESTION[/b]

*We could really use the implementation of true keylogger in subsequent versions of Devil Recovery, everything else is [color=#FF0000][b]superb[/b][/color]!Am not sure about adding Keylogger in the Stealer , but if users like this Stealer I might release a stand alone keylogger. ?

Flexid - May 24, 2016, 2:32 am

Code Its a stealer and it only send 1 email as it gathers all Login details.
time interval is not useful here.

Well if this is so, will a startup feature send logs at every restart?

yes, It will send the same logs every time on startup and so only you can see I do not recommend to use startup from the stealer.

Got to leave a couch for this product! I've been using it for about a week now testing on multiple computers! Passwords get recovered fairly simply and with a guarantee to retrieve passwords if they exist! I recommend buying this software for when the product is released!

_Devil - July 13, 2016, 6:28 am

Pm send to all who posted above

Thanks 4 the share buddy,

Hello,
I have used some free keylogger in the past, such as dracula etc. first it worked i get the test mail but when i try to send to a victim, i simply get no results what so ever. i don't know what's the problem, but what i'm asking here is:
is using a private keylogger such as this one will insure the results? or is it a common problem in keyloggers in general.
i don't know what the problem is, if it's gmail related or something like that. also i had some success using offline keyloggers, but other than that i had a bad experience in keyloggers like this (send via email/ftp) i'm not a noob i know what i'm doing, except i need the proper tool for it.
Thanks,
