Thread: What to do over Summer break?

JuiceWater - May 27, 2016, 4:07 pm

Good day, chaps.

Well, school is finally out and I get to stay with my mom over the Summer (Where I'm used to living). I was all excited during the last week of school, thinking non-stop about how much fun I was going to have when school was out, all the stuff I get to do, projects, chilling and relaxing, etc. But now that it's actually Summer, I'm really bored. I'm SO frustrated right now because I'm so bored, so bored! I've read all of the books I own, I'm wanted at my local library for a $310 overdue book fee, all of my friends are either still in school or going on a vacation to the Bahamas or something.

My mind is still in school-mode, I'm so used to getting up early and working, working, working, that I woke up with a headache after sleeping in, and my mind won't let me just be lazy all day. What to do, chaps?

tl;dr I'm very bored right now since Summer break just started. I have no books to read, my friends aren't here, and my mind wants to do something.

What do you enjoy doing? Do your hobbies, stuff you didn't have time for when you were in school. Make money, that never hurts.

I'm working on some of my project ideas over the summer. Studying up WPF and such, and also planning to meet with my group weekly to work on other projects.

I pretty much did what I wanted when I was in school. Me and my friends started up a lawncare business that made a couple thousand dollars in total but they are all down South (Since I'm staying with my mom). ?

Play video games.

Masturbate.

Go on a boat.

The possibilities are endless.

Listen/Produce Music if you're into it.

Learn to code.

Go to the Gym.

Masturbate.

Hope to catch up on old hobbies that I left behind since school studies started.

Editing, Music, Programming, and actually playing video games.

Hope to catch up on all those fun things these next few months, chillax and stuff of that nature y'know.
