It's all in black and white skid, report me for whatever the fuck you like im exposing a scammer wasting peoples time trying to slither out of scamming $2. It's as simple as that.

Dont act like you're going to help me when you have clearly stated you are not. You refund me, its that simple. You dont, well you will get banned at some point, if its me or the next person you rip off.

I dont feel the need to keep disputing this, as I said. You can refund me, you have my details. You can insult me and lie all you want, its $2. I have invested far to much time proving your lies wrong at my own expense. You will get banned eventually, mark my words. That will be my last reply.

Mr. Robot - May 30, 2016, 3:58 am

Make sure to check <http://leakedsource.com/> or <https://www.leakedsource.com/main/?a=2189> (my referral) for any database breaches you have been in, someone may have logged into your account using a password you have used elsewhere.

Also disconnect from the internet if possible and change passwords on another device until you have double checked for infection.

Please also post the bitcoin address it was changed to.

Did you sign up to any sites with the same password you used on AIOBuy.

I mean ANY site (including facebook). A lot of databases have been dumped resulting in a lot of combolists being made and tried against systems like AIOBuy.

Yes I have, I changed the password to a unique one.

They probably had you in a combolist, I would advise also changing all other passwords to unique passwords.

Tools like LastPass and KeePass can help with this and even automate the process.

AIOBuy has no captcha system (and a what seems like really shitty csrf method).

I'm not sure why he removed it, or did not actually get around to adding it.

Well, why not implement a captcha, google captcha is free isnt it?

No shit, I told him on the thread.

Its stupid not to have such things for login and registration at least.
