Thread: looking for free rat and vpn\(portforwarding\)

Bro Im Rambo - May 30, 2016, 9:35 pm

are their any free:

rats

vpn with portforwarding

i havent been on in a while. i use to use blackshade and cybergate but i think that they are all shut down now.

Free RAT would be darkcomet or jrat - there are a few others but you will need to pay for a crypter.

VPN with port forwarding, there are a few - not too sure what's current.

I would recommend making the purchase for a decent RAT if you want to do it properly or learn how to use msfconsole or create payloads.

Free VPNs? no not really, some floating around the free stuff section

Just buy RA4W VPN it's 2.50$ a month and you won't regret it!

Finding a free VPN that supports port forwarding is nearly impossible. You will have to pay for that kind of service. I recommend either RA4WVpn, or nVPN. Either way, you shouldn't have to pay more than $10 a month for a decent VPN that port forwards. Just make sure it doesn't hold logs. As for a free rat, I would have suggested Babylon, but it has recently been criticized because of its incompetence to mine passwords correctly. This is probably a good time to just buy a rat as well. I suggest Orcas but there are many others in the rat section.

Also, not to conflict with what Mr.Robot said, but I personally wouldn't use a rat like Dark Comet. Here's why:It's an outdated 2008 Delphi Build.

It's no longer as stable as it used to be.

It has a major FTP & SQL vulnerability that your bots can use negatively against you.

Even with a full crypt, it's generic actions can be detected by antiviral software.

Some versions don't even work correctly.

It has many other bugs.

Edit: Blackshades has long been compromised. You'll probably have your computer seized. Read here.
