Thread: [Question about the clover awards \[ORGY COME AND TRY IT OUT\]](#)

Joy - June 5, 2016, 7:25 am

1. If i post something with 90 characters and this time it won't be allowed to get the clover award but if i edit it and change it to >100 characters will it be considered for the clover award again?
2. If i post something with >100 characters and this time i lose the draw that is auto-generated but if i edit it and change it and it still remains >100 characters will it be considered for the clover award draw again?

3. Is the OP of the thread counted for the draw?

Thanks. I hope i win the clover award.

These are actually decent questions. Hope Omniscient sees this, as I too would like to know the answers to these questions.

I think you need to post 100 chars to activate the Clover giveaway, once you get it I'm sure you could even delete the post and your award will stay.

Did you read my questions or are you blindly giving a reply just to increase your post count and to cross the 100 characters barrier?

- 1: probably not from what omni said, since it's instant.
- 2: Judging from facts presented, also probably not.
- 3: for sure no from omnis post

These are good questions.

The OP cannot get the clover award in the initial post. You can, however, reply to your own thread. That's how I got mine.

As for the other two, I would also say no. Seems like cheating, lol.

No. You must submit the post initially with the 100 characters. Edits do not run the function.

As above. Only initial submission runs the function and so editing it is irrelevant.

No sir.

The OP of the thread doesn't count for the award, only regular posts do. It is mentioned in the award announcement thread. ?

All of your answers can be found here: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5291481>

1. Editing your post to make it 100+ characters does not count.
2. No, it will not be redrawn again, because edits don't count.
3. The original post does not count towards the possibility of the award.

Quote:Each reply you make gives you a chance to win and be granted the award. We require 100 characters in the post and that your post count is at least 100 for you to be eligible. Does not require any upgraded account. Will work for any reply, in any section, with the exception for new thread creation posts or post edits.

I'm 100% sure that Omni stated that opening new threads don't count. And neither do edited posts. Did you even bother to read the thread lol.

Anyways thanks for answering my queries.

Thanks
