Thread: I quit my job today.

Reven?nt - June 5, 2016, 2:35 pm

Well, I could've had a better day. I have been having problems at my job for a while regarding hours, I am a full-time college student and told them I can't work more than 20 hours (20 hours is perfect to cover my bills and I wasn't going to take a bunch of hours + college if I didn't have to).

Anyways, I didn't get any hours the past week or two, they transferred me to another department of the store today (because there weren't enough hours in my department, and that is when it gets bad.

After 10 minutes of being there, another (I think manager) walks into the room and he was giving me the stink eye and coming off as rude right away, he said "You are the new guy huh, I hope you do better here than you did in the other department" I didn't know what I did wrong in the other department, so I ask "What did I do wrong in the other department" he didn't say anything and gave me the cold shoulder.

We happen to be alone in the cooler a few minutes later, I then ask him "So what did I do wrong in the other department" he stopped and kind of snapped at me saying "Look, we have work to do here, I am not sure what you're used to but we need to get things done", I then said "I would like to know why you have been rude to me ever since I got here", he then stops and takes a step toward me and tries to intimidate me (Note, he is in his 50's and I am 20) he then says "Do we have a problem, I am your boss, we can go upstairs and talk to the manager" I said "we don't have a problem, but you have been rude to me ever since I got here and I would like to know why" he kind of just blows it off and tries to boss me around.

30 seconds later the managers call me and there are 2 store managers + my department manager, I thought at first it was about what happened, then they started talking about hours and thought I said I was open and could work 40 hours (not what I said at all), so, they then send me to the front of the store to bag groceries and push carts (note, it is 110 degrees out right now) and this is the one position in the store I said I wouldn't do.

After a few hours, I said "I can't do this shit for 8 hours", so I told my manager I quite and told him I am writing a complaint about happened in the other department before I leave.

I never had any problems with customers, always treated everyone nice and with respect. I still don't know what I did in my previous department that caused problems. Managers don't tell you there is a problem, they just talk behind your back to everyone about it I guess. Note, during this conversation with the guy who had a problem, I never once raised my voice and acted rude, I talked in a completely calm and relaxed tone, he was the one who was getting aggressive.

There is one funny thing that I can take from this. When I first got there, I went to the break room to put my stuff in a locker, there was a kid who was 17 there, he was new and asked me questions about how to read the schedule, we talked a bit and he said he worked up front, I told him "I would never do that and would quit if I had to" he was cool and I told him I will see him around. 20 minutes later I am two checkout lines away from him putting groceries in bags.

If you actually read all this you are a champ. If you have any questions about the whole situation please ask, I was not in the wrong here. So, how was your day?

Jesus bro, you could atleast put a TLDR.

No because it's not for people like you who just wants to read stuff and then go. Just read it. It's totally worth it, I did...

? Social Panel - June 5, 2016, 2:38 pm

I'd do something about the formatting or whatever. It's just a huge wall of text, and it hurts my eyes. Also, I'd probably add a TLDR.

Reven?nt - June 5, 2016, 2:41 pm

I'll try to add at TLDR and format it differently.

Cryptography - June 5, 2016, 2:41 pm

Nice job man, would quit that shitty job if I was put in such a position just like that as well. Wish you luck or maybe it's a sign for you to start your own entrepreneurial journey :).

European Union - June 5, 2016, 2:42 pm

I will make a TLDR for y'all lazy asses out there.

TL:DR He is a full-time college student, works at a store, got moved another to department, boss is a douchebag, managers asks him to work 40 hours instead of the 20 hours he usually do, so i he quit, and filled a complaint about the douchebag boss. And they changed his position in the store.

M?tt - June 5, 2016, 2:42 pm

For people asking for TL;DR: OP quit his job because the manager was an asshole, plain and simple.

Also to those asking for TL;DR, it's not like you have to leave a post. If it's too long, move to another thread. Pretty simple honestly.

As to you OP, I've never worked in a grocery shop ever, but I would have left once the guy was saying "Do we have a problem?" if you were asking a simple question. Nonetheless, you'll find better opportunities out there. You respect yourself and that's important.

Troja?Hors? - June 5, 2016, 2:43 pm

You seem like a nice guy and from what I read you really didn't deserve to get fired. You're going to come across cunts like them in your life, just put it behind you OP.

Ta-kun - June 5, 2016, 2:45 pm

You're not gonna make it far in life if you think you'll find the perfect job. All starting jobs suck ass, you just have to grit your teeth and keep pushing.

Dismal. - June 5, 2016, 2:46 pm

It seems the boomers are harder and harder on millennials now a days. You weren't in the wrong, it was probably something nonsensical that made him angry. Hell, maybe his kid is a loser who lives at home and has no job so he's taking it out on you. You deserve better though, no job is worth being miserable.

I didn't get fired, I quit. The managers were being completely rude and show no respect, they wanted me to bow down to them but I never did which might be why they're mad. I always show everyone respect, it doesn't matter if you're a child or an old lady, however, if you are going to completely treat me like crap and expect me to just take it and bow down, then you are wrong. Even when they were completely rude to me I never raised my voice or disrespected them. However, I always demanded an answer regarding whatever the issue may be.

The job itself didn't pay much and was difficult, however, I am not complaining about the job itself, I am complaining about management and how they treated me. The management was a joke, they could never get anything right. I understand I will have to work, however, I don't have to be treated like a slave and looked down on. Plus, you can't verbally and physically try to intimidate someone at the workplace, and that is exactly what he was doing.

Welcome to any job you have before you have an actual career. All your bosses are people who are grown adults and couldn't ever get any better job, so they settled and are mad when their authority of being "store manager" doesn't get the respect it "deserves".

I put in my two weeks yesterday and I work retail. Today my friend texted me saying they were talking shit about me leaving and they always talked crap about me complaining about my job blah blah blah. And I did complain cus people would leave me with EVERYTHING to do as they sit around talking to their friends lol. And if I didn't do everything, I am the one who got bitched at. No one else.

On top of that, I moved. So that job was no longer needed. I changed my availability and they tried to give me 4.5 hours one week LOL. So the gas from where I moved to there didn't profit for me financially (pretty much broke even) and then I hated working there with annoying ass adults who acted like children. So I have 3 more days and I'm done (-:

Funniest part is they're all being petty cus they think it's over the 4.5 hours. And I'm sitting here like... How many of you told me I was crazy cus I drove 120 miles round trip to get to and from work where I make $9/hr. So I take your advice and leave and now you wanna talk shit? LMAO.

Any food or retail job is meant for only short term cus after being there too long, that shit drains you. I busted my ass for 8 months and I am so happy I won't be working there anymore.

This is exactly how I am taking it. I have been wanting to start a business for quite a while. I have money saved up, so tuition and other bills I don't have to worry about for quite a while. This was partially while I quit too, I have money saved up and don't really have bills, I don't have to deal with the BS that job had.

I was only paid $8 an hour. While I was up front I never stopped working, however, the younger kids would keep talking to each other. Store managers are assholes because of their jobs. I learned pretty quick that the people who lift others up and are generous are the ones who are happy with their life and pursuing a goal, while the other people who are rude and power hungry are the ones who never did anything with their life. The guy is in his 50's and probably makes $15 an hour, so perhaps that explains why he is a rude asshole. I am a hard worker, I had to lift and push heavy crap and be in the cold all day, then I would have to clean a dirty and bloody room at the end of the day and get all wet and cold (I worked in the Meat Department), however, I never complained. The job wasn't worth $8 an hour, however, it was a job and I kept with it for almost 7 months. The people I worked with and the managers are the reason it was a horrible job.

I want to commend you OP. You're only 20 and you've already learnt that it's OK to stand up for yourself and question "authority" (the 50 year old manager).

I'm 35 and it took me a lot longer to realise this. The world is full of idiots and bullies who will push you around like this and if you let them you WILL end up pushing trolleys and work as hard as you like, you'll never receive full appreciation for doing it.

Keep speaking up for yourself, DO question those who are rude to you for no reason, often they are bullies who are used to getting away with that behaviour and they're in the wrong.

An example in my current job, a lazy manager who doesn't do his job properly told us we had to work on our days off although it wasn't our turn, his lack of planning due to his own laziness meant he hadn't covered the work properly and there was an hour left of our last 12 hour night shift. By refusing and standing up for ourselves his laziness was highlighted and his managers realised he was not doing his job. He recently got sacked.

Eminem - June 5, 2016, 3:31 pm

I don't think you were in the wrong. I'm in a similar situation in a way, but they're doing things illegal, so it's a bit more complicated I guess.

Jobs come and go, but it's better to do something you enjoy, than something you hate.

All I gotta say is, when you're that young, why work for a shitty company you won't be with forever and be miserable?

Some careers have people being miserable. But you're literally 20. You have your whole life ahead of you. No reason to sit and take shit from a little minimum wage job if they're gunna treat you like crap.

Treat me like I'm disposable and I'm gunna leave. I'm not gunna beg for hours or change. It's just a shitty job anyways.

I worked in a supermarket as well, I worked in the meat department and basically my description was to learn about the craft to move up to butcher, was there for 5 months and worked 5pm-12pm and pretty much did nothing but clean up after the old men because they felt they were too good to do it.

I quit on the phone. 10 minutes before my shift started and the head butchers ended, I hope he enjoyed that 12 hour workday.

It was simply a job to help pay for tuition and other bills. I stayed because not everyone will let me work only 15-20 hours and work around my college. They stopped giving me the hours I needed and all these problems arose, so I am happy to of quit. I definitely won't be working at any store or shit job the rest of my life, that is why I am in college to have many options.

Holy shit, that's some beta shit right there. Better learn how to deal with it because you're sounding like a female, you will never succeed if you cannot get your boss to like you. Stop with the emotions, your emotions don't matter, if what's coming out of your mouth sounds like a threat/putting-him-in-check how do you think he'll react to you when he has more power than you?

Better learn how to deal with it because you're sounding like a female, you will never succeed if you cannot get your boss to like you. Stop with the emotions, your emotions don't matter, if what's coming out of your mouth sounds like a threat/putting-him-in-check how do you think he'll react to you when he has more power than you?

He's an Uber, you're a normal member, if you say something with negative emotions to him you'll get neg repped, rage, and quit.

What are you even talking about? Just be quiet, you don't know what you are even talking about.

Looks better now. I'm sorry that you quit your job, because it seems like it was a good opportunity for you. Keep your head up though, you never know if you'll find another one.

Lol thanks for the rep, stay homeless for the rest of your life you white little bitch. I work 12 hours a day in a 20 degree freezer lifting 50+ pounds of meat constantly, and you can't can't push carts. Fucking beta as fuck. Life is gonna eat your little ass up boi.

Nasyr - June 6, 2016, 8:26 am

Dude if I was in that situation I probably would have quit my job too. Getting passed between departments and managers being ignorant towards you with no explanation.

Desolate Night - June 6, 2016, 8:27 am

Some people are so dumb and act cocky when they have some authority over you. Your boss is supposed to oversee you, not to order you around.

You did good to leave the job, I'd probably do the same.

?Opulence - June 6, 2016, 8:27 am

Damn that sucks. Sounds like your manager was a real dick. Guess that means it was time for a change anyway lol You should look for a new job more related to your field of study.

theogg - June 6, 2016, 8:29 am

I had my second interview today for a new job (same role .NET Developer) but a £10,000 ($15,000) increase a year.

Joy - June 6, 2016, 8:29 am

You should put up a TLDR that some long read. Anyways looking at your thread title i would say "Good luck finding a new job and gl with your life

It was quite frustrating. I always stayed professional, though. They could never explain the issue, or why there was miscommunication, they were so incompetent.

Are you sure that you didn't do anything wrong leading up to this?

Also, it's just a starting job. It's not meant to be fun, and you can't be picky.

Heart of Kings - June 6, 2016, 1:49 pm

You had a bad experience from what I could tell. you shouldn't of burned any bridges but you did so good luck finding a new job and everything!

No, I did nothing wrong. I asked more than once what I had done wrong, however, no one said anything. Even in my last department I asked the people I work with and my manager if I did anything wrong, I said: "Have I done anything wrong, because if so, I would like to know so I can fix it". I think it's because managers try to walk all over the employees and treat them like they are less than them, however, I would always speak my mind and didn't let them walk all over me. Note, I was never rude and disrespectful, however, if they gave me crap for no reason I would calmly explain why I did what I did and why they were wrong etc.

Zexo - June 6, 2016, 1:51 pm

Makes me happy that my managers and co workers are so nice to me and everyone there.

Bluffer - June 6, 2016, 1:52 pm

That is really shitty what happened to you, please do file a complaint and get that guy in trouble.

Find yourself a better job where people will treat you with respect.

Why the fuck can everyone not read the damn op? Jesus it takes longer to write a response than to read it.

Yeah, I made sure I filed a complaint before I left. I am also contacting the Union and letting them know what happened.

ZuGgY - June 6, 2016, 1:57 pm

Good for you. Don't take shit like that.

Funny that somebody today posted about a new job.

There's a lot of arseholes in the working world, no point taking their shit, just move and and look for a job elsewhere. Nobody deserves to be treated like shit.

Much appreciated. You are right, no one should go to work and leave feeling unhappy and worthless. The managers are most likely unhappy with their life, they're in their 50's and make $13-20 an hour (depending on their position of course). I would be extremely unhappy working in a store my entire life.

M?tt - June 6, 2016, 2:12 pm

Have you started looking for other jobs yet? Hoping you get back on that money grind soon.

CasperXN - June 6, 2016, 2:13 pm

Some people are just assholes like that, any little bit of power will corrupt them and they think they're so much better than you because they can boss you around. Looks like you got unlucky with these dicks, sorry to hear about the job OP. Life is hard like that, hopefully you find something new in a reasonable amount of time. Good luck man.

AMAVI - June 6, 2016, 2:17 pm

Went through the hole thing, seems like the manager is just one of those dudes that likes picking on the new guys, he likes to have the feeling that he's powerful, fucking spastic..

Good shit that you quit, seemed like a shit job anyway.

Hopefully you find another good job soon!

I applied to 4-5 different places and called around even before this incident happened because I wanted to find something else; I haven't had any luck yet. I may just focus on college for a couple of months and start a business that I have contemplating for quite a while. I will also be transferring colleges in a few months, and I could get a job on campus. I have a couple thousand saved up, and my tuition isn't that much plus I don't have any bills really, so it's not like I will be living on the streets.

I couldn't have said it better myself. Much appreciated man. I will definitely update you guys if I get another job. Also, I am not going to let this incident slide, so hopefully the guy will be fired once I push this forward to the Union. I'll keep you updated.

If you can manage a small business while getting your education, then definitely do it. You make your own hours and decide how much money you make in a said day / week. Keep on going brotha!

I appreciate the kind words, brother. Is your avatar the guy from Ed Edd n Eddy? I loved that show haha; used to watch it all the time growing up.

Update: I just talked to the Union and explained everything, he explained how they were wrong for what they did and is calling the store to talk about it now. Glad I have these guys backing me up.

Update 2: The store manager said I can come in and talk about what happen tomorrow. The Union guy (pretty sure he's a lawyer) will meet me at the store and be a part of the conversation to back me up. Not sure if I really want to have the meeting, however, I may go. Also, the guy who was being rude and tried to physically and verbally intimidate me most likely won't be punished. He has been there a long time and it would be his word against mine type of thing.

For those who know the entire story, please come to my updated thread, I would appreciate some advice on this. <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5296172>
