Thread: M4z3 \(uid=2730317 \) using stolen Paypals.

Armada - June 20, 2016, 12:37 pm

So the user m4z3 purchased Orcus on saturday. To this effect the user PMed asking the license be sent to an alternative Email as opposed to the paypal email, this I did find to be an odd request, but seeing as I already sent the license, replied that it had been sent to the corresponding email on record with paypal.

Today I just received notification of the transaction being unauthorized, and a charge back was in place.

DO NOT ACCEPT PAYPAL FROM THIS USER

Shame on this user, there is no reason to use someone else's money like that. I can't stand fraud.

Thanks for the warning and seems like a legitimate report.
Hopefully this gets resolved.

Not much to resolve. Banned the licence and told paypal to refund. What else can be done? This is more of a warning to others, Ive not lost anything from this. Just glad this happened now as opposed to end of the month when I need to do the accounting.

This is like harassing orcus and Armada, buying this RAT with someone's money

Well it's an open forum and I can post whatever I'd like lol. I just thought it was silly for you to bump it when he's not even active at the moment.

Also, how is it unresolved you canceled his license = you lost nothing but your time which I guess is worth something?

Even charge backs cost legitimate businesses.
And its a simple reminder to everyone.

People like this can have numerous accounts and leave them stagnant for months on end until attention is drawn away from them.

I guess I'm just overthinking things and being annoying, sorry.

he's posted the email address mrmyke@optonline.net in threads too, so that's probably another e-mail people should be cautious of lol this dude doesn't need to be pulling crap like this. I think i found his personal twitter just playing around aimlessly on google. I can't imagine paypal or LE having any trouble if they decided to ever investigate this kind of fraud
