Thread: Removing Watermarks from images! Help clarkie1122 - June 24, 2016, 11:20 am

Hi all,

A TLDR of the situation is that we had some pictures taken that we paid to be done and the women is now charging us £30 per image. Their are around 20 images but they are watermarked.

Can someone help me out and take the watermark from the images! :(

Literally just by searching this question I've found some viable results:

On the other hand, it can sometimes depend on how strong or conspicuous the water mark is. Photoshop is pretty handy for removing objects or areas from unwanted images.

Already searched this and downloaded InPaint and this did not work.

The watermark is over the image of a person.

Stop being a scumbag and pay for the shit. Shouldn't have had your pictures taken if you didn't plan on paying.

Removing watermarks is not a difficult task depending on the image. Send me a PM with the image, and I will guide you through the steps to remove it.

Please keep in mind; if this image is subject to copyright, you could get in quite a bit of trouble for doing so. Proceed with caution.

Watermarks are easy to remove depending on how much its spammed across the image, then not so much. Just pay for it lol

Would not be a "scumbag" if she told the correct information before taking our money.

If you could also see what the women is charging to put an image from a camera to a disk you would laugh yourself.

Then you should have done your research and gone with someone more reputable. The internet, Google, YELP, etc exist for a reason.
