Thread: REMOTE MAC KEYLOGGER FOR MAC?? ANYONE??? HELP

mapam - June 28, 2016, 9:47 pm

Still searching for a remote install MAC keylogger that can be binded to a jpg or other common file and deployed from a PC. Does ANYONE have a suggestion. this is the most elusive thing I've ever seen

Dutch_Apple - June 29, 2016, 5:34 am

Its elusive because its impossible :D

To clarify:

Mac Keylogger - Possible

Remote install - Very difficult without target user interaction

Bind and hide in jpg - Impossible

As an alternative to jpg, it is possible that microsoft word or pdf files could be used but again, for Mac it is unlikely as most people target the most popular OS:
Windows

Wow. Thank you for your info. I was just certain there would be a keylogger or RAT out there somewhere that could be deployed to a MAC in a stealth mode. I understand the target must click 'something' to execute the keylogger, but it would appear they're just clicking a photo, or doc or something else and would not realize the keylogger was installing. I use PC but was needing the RAT or keylogger to go to a Mac. Disappointed. But thank you again.

I'm coding a Java keylogger which will run on OSX. PM if you want to be notified on launch, hope to get this out in a few days.

Vortex, is your logger able to be remotely deployed to the MAC and opened with a disguise as a jpg or other common file?
