Thread: Help with creating multiple accounts with online book makers, without them knowing?

For those who aren't aware, there is currently a method known as Matched Betting online in which you can take advantage of free bets offered by online bookmakers. Some providing up to £200 for placing bets (Which can't be lost, by backing / laying on another website, there's a whole article on this at SaveTheStudent, but because I can't link you'll need to google it).

I've made myself roughly £1000 in a week doing this with very little effort. How difficult would it be to set up say, two or three accounts, assign different VPN's within VM's and semi-autopilot the system, by manually controlling one VM, and replicating everything on the other two.

The hardest part is avoiding getting Gubbed, in which bookies will actively close all accounts they believe to be owned by the same person.

As far as I can see it I would need to be able to do the following:

Create a fake persona for each additional account.

Create a separate Paypal email for each additional account.

Assign a different IP address which is not publicly available to each VM.

Avoid having to provide proof of address or ID. A lot of bookies aren't very strict on this.

If someone is willing to help me out with this, I'd be willing to split my profit from the first week of success (Roughly £1500 if all goes to plan)

So do you actually get to keep the money you make with the matched money

You keep around 95% of the free bet and 95% of your own cash, sometimes you get lucky and get a lot more than the value of the bet, but that's a different explanation for another day.

Like I say, I can't link the article directly, but googling "Matched Betting Save The Student" provides you with the article.

As another poster has mentioned here, try yesbets... Makes matched betting much faster and easier.. Few screenshots of people that make an easy £500-£700 per month risk free and you can do reloads too, not just signups.
