Thread: We stand with Dallas Police Department

Pentester™ - July 8, 2016, 7:01 am

Last night a peaceful protest erupted into chaos when Dallas Police Officers were being shot at, Currently the death toll is at 5 Officers Deceased and 7 injured including 2 civilians, The suspect was then killed by a bomb. The suspect had claimed he had acted alone Chief Brown said an investigation into the ambush continues.

"I'm not going to be satisfied until we've turned over every stone. We've got some level that this one suspect did do some of the shooting. But we're not satisfied that we've exhausted every lead," he said. "So if there's someone out there who's associated with this, we will find you, we will prosecute you, and we will bring you to justice."

How do you feel about what has happened?

First time I'm hearing of it, got a link?

SkullTraill - July 8, 2016, 7:06 am

I feel like it was completely justified.

This isn't just about one policeman harassing/murdering one black man. The police system in america has AS A WHOLE been SYSTEMATICALLY harassing and murdering black people since it's inception.

It's not about hating the individual police officers anymore. It's about hating the police as a whole. And that hatred is COMPLETELY justified.

Yes, some potentially innocent police officers have lost their lives, but it's the only avenue for black people to vent their anger now, seeing as the justice system does not fairly deal with murderous police officers. 3 months paid leave and then resumed service is not a suitable repercussion for murdering an innocent (or guilty, for that matter, unless they pose immediate threat to life) person.

This is the only option they had for justice.

It's time for america to re-think their police system.

Just FYI: I'm not black, nor am I american.

Well I'm saying I do see your side to this, But if you were a police officer you'd see it much differently, Those officers yesterday said goodbye to their families one last time, Not knowing they weren't going to come home, Those officers left a life behind them, there's one thing that's true, There is a human behind that badge and human life is precious, we've all seen the videos of people being abused and beaten by cops, There are cops out there that just shouldn't be cops, But as a First Responder I can't really agree that opening fire on officers that had nothing to do with that incident is really necessary.

syrius01 - July 8, 2016, 7:22 am

It's sad that some maybe innocent cops paid for the error of other cops but in the same time with the situation going on in the U.S with all those black people killed for nothing, this kind of incident was coming without a doubt.

I would agree with you, but in this case I can not. And let me explain why. You say it was not necessary, but tell me, innocent black people died at the hands of cops, tell me, what are THEY supposed to do? Those cops will NEVER be punished under the justice system in america, I'm asking you, tell me, what avenues do the blacks in america have to stand their ground? Are you asking them to shut their mouths and be constantly subjugated by white cops for ever? No. That is unfair. Innocent cops died today, but that was not the fault of black people, that was the fault of the police and justice system in your country. Simple as that.

Lol @ all of this.

Do you know how many black people are shot at by cops? LESS than the # of white people that are shot at by cops. Do you know how many black people are killed by cops for unjust reasons? LESS than the # of white people that are killed by cops for unjust reasons.

Did you know that only around 1-2 "disputed shootings of black people" happen in America each month? Source: Barrack Obama's speech

Did you know that only a small FRACTION of these 1-2 disputed monthly shootings are declared "unjust"? Do you know what this means? This means that the amount of innocent blacks being shot by police is a tiny number, and the number is still lower than the amount of white people unjustly killed by cops.

Please do some fucking research before you come in here and spew bullshit man.

Lol... Clearly you're the one not using Google.

If you do a Google search for "black vs white death from cops" or something similar you'll see that there are far more whites being killed by cops than blacks. You're a troll and I'm done replying to this thread. Your last reply PROVES that you haven't done ANY research and are unwilling to do any in the future. LQ troll.

I do see what you are saying but what do you think is going to happen now? A Dallas police officer just lost his partner/best friend, For all we know he could open fire at one of these rallies. All I see is that the Justice System needs to be fixed and for cops to be tried not as cops but as civilians. The system is more lenient on them because they're supposed to know the law and always claim they were threatened which is complete bullshit, I watched a video where a cop had his knee on the guys left hand and was holding the guys right hand and he point blanked him in the chest, and that cop will get in no trouble because the guy had a gun, If I had a gun (I'm white) I would of been taken into custody not shot at or beaten.

I don't give a shit about races you fucktard. I was just using that to illustrate why what happened today actually happened. This isn't about black vs white, this is about innocent people vs cops. What you just posted makes the argument for standing with the police even weaker. Police should not be killing ANYBODY unless they are clearly about to kill someone else.

Also, those statistics you reported are statistics released by ding ding ding the police/justice department. Totally credible. All you need to look at are the videos from the last few days, there are just 2 incidents that happened to be recorded, there will be many times more that are unrecorded. Regardless, even if just 1 person was killed unjustly, it is still a serious issue, police officers should be held accountable, and they are not right now, and that is what I am protesting.

Please argue about something relevant instead of talking nonsense you fucking spastic.

Dude... You're clueless. You say this isn't about race, but the shooting you're talking about (the one you say is justified) is about race. The shooter even said "he wanted to kill as many whites, especially white officers, as possible". He said he was inspired by Black Lives Matter and he wanted to kill white people because of cop shootings of black people.

You're saying a racist shooting is justified, and yet you claim this isn't about race. Lol, you don't even know the facts of the fucking shooting and yet you think you have a right to talk about it?

All in all, I don't see anything wrong with police in America. I'm fine with the way they are. A tiny amount of innocent people die each DECADE, and that's collateral damage. It's sad when a cop kills someone for an unjust reason, but that's the price on the protection they provide each and every day. They are not going around killing people for no reason. Most unjust killings are serious misunderstandings / tough circumstances / it's not like the cop just picked someone to kill that day. Also, cops ARE held accountable. Find me a cop that murdered someone or shot someone unjustly and wasn't punished / made public. You say the cops aren't a good credible source (Um, can you please show me where I posted a cop-related source?), and yet they're more than willing to cooperate in the trials. Hell, many cops even wear body cams now so it IS more accountable and many chiefs have imposed consequences for cops who turn off their body cam, or show up with a broken one (to discourage them breaking them on purpose). This is accountability in action.

You say "FUCK THE COPS FOR KILLING PEOPLE - BUT ITS OKAY FOR THIS GUY TO KILL COPS". You make yourself sound like a 12 year old dimwit within a sentence of your posts bro.

You're a disgrace. Thank god you're not American. True Americans stand behind their police and military. Regardless of the race issue (because you want to just ignore it, lol) of this specific shooting, the "activist" was a goddamn terrorist. Not only did he shoot innocents from an elevated position, he shot cops that were trying to protect the innocents, and even threatened that IEDs were scattered around the city. He's invoking terror through words and action. He's not a fucking "activist" and nothing he did was justified.

Violence against innocents and random cops is never justified.
Anyways, this thread is cancerous, I will not see your reply - I'm out.

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/graphics/national/police-shootings-2016/>

Most shootings are justified, only a small number accounting for unjustified shootings. What in your right mind makes you believe this is justified? Just because a few individuals may have been killed in an unjustified manner, how does that make the same act on another party justified? People are disgruntled over apparent innocent killings of civilians by police, in which they are protesting about, but then they turn around and do the same act that they're protesting about. Anyone that commits the act of innocently killing a cop just became just as bad as a cop that killed an innocent civilian. Two wrongs don't make a right, and this is definitely not a justified event to see multiple cops being killed.

Quote:I agree with that part, but sometimes the only way to initiate change is with shock/force. People have been demanding for years that the police be held more accountable, but until now, nothing has happened.

Right, but not this type of force. If anything, this just raises the tension. As I said, two wrongs do not make a right. Innocent officers did not have to die in order to get a message across. Literally, what the shooter did, is not going to change a damn thing for the better. He just made this worse using a cowardly act of terrorism.

The situations where the officer gets administrative leave are all situations where the shooting is justified, or they're conducting an investigation on an officer. Most of these shootings are justified, and many people think that, or else they wouldn't get off the hook. You have to look at incidents from the officers perspective. If you're out on a call and you know that a significant majority that people do not like you as a cop, you're going to be wary of that and aware that the possibility of someone trying to hurt you is very real. On top of that, you see a person that appears to be reaching for a firearm. As a cop, are you going to risk losing your life because you don't want to be seen as racist or over stepping your bounds? No. You're going to shoot that fucker that seems to be reaching for that firearm because at the end of the day, it's your life or his. Take a look at it from a cop's perspective and you will be enlightened, I promise you. Do some cops mess up as a result of this? Yes, it happens. However, a majority of the time, these shootings are justified. The only reason people think otherwise is because people always have to bring fucking race into everything and always make every. single. incident. the cop's fault. Even incidents where a black man is rightfully shot and killed, people have to bring race into it and make it seem unjustified. Media and the way the community views all this is bullshit.

The situations with a lot of these shootings involving police and seemingly innocent civilians is nothing in comparison to some racist fucker just blatantly blasting away at innocent cops at a peaceful protest, doing their job. That isn't justice, it's terrorism.

no disrespect but in the video they cut out 29 seconds of it not showing the full clip the media does this all time to get the people fired up and make the white cops look bad its really stupid that the media is allowed to cut out parts of a video soon the full video will be released without the cuttings in it.

You guys do know it was only 1 Lone shooter?

Because I see a lot of "Persons" "they" "their"

Like you are trying to blame an entire group of people.

SIM-1725686 - July 8, 2016, 10:18 am

Hey, to any of you trying justifying anybody getting shot, whether they are a cop or an innocent citizen...

Fuck you.

You can either keep looking for whom to blame, or you can grow up and work together to make a change. There have been multiple solutions proposed to reform the police system, so let's get them implemented.

Write a letter to your local sheriff. Don't just sit here while more people die.

You probably see those words because we are not sure if there were more than one person involved, therefore are leaving the possibility open for multiple people to be involved. It's an ongoing investigation and no one is sure who else may have been involved. It's not anyone trying to blame a whole group of people, stop trying to bring irrelevant things into the situation.

Quote:authorities said the gunman who said he targeted white officers was killed, three potential suspects were in custody and police were still trying to investigate who may have been involved in the attack.

I was quoting someone who posted on this thread. Found it unbelievable that he said it wasn't his fault for pulling the trigger on the police but it was the police's fault. Can't believe someone can say that I don't think anyone deserves to die. I think systematic reform of the criminal justice system is important, but I don't think this is exactly how we do it. I think it is super important that we realize that we are fighting a broken system moreso than fighting racist cops. And what happened yesterday in Dallas was a slaughter.

Exactly, you're right.

At this point, I think it's ok to just abandon speaking about here and go straight to contacting law enforcement.

This isn't just about one policeman harassing/murdering one black man. The police system in america has AS A WHOLE been SYSTEMATICALLY harassing and murdering black people since it's inception.

It's not about hating the individual police officers anymore. It's about hating the police as a whole. And that hatred is COMPLETELY justified.

Yes, some potentially innocent police officers have lost their lives, but it's the only avenue for black people to vent their anger now, seing as the justice system does not fairly deal with murderous police officers. 3 months paid leave and then resumed service is not a suitable repercussion for murdering an innocent (or guilty, for that matter, unless they pose immediate threat to life) person.

This is the only option they had for justice.

It's time for america to re-think their police system.

Just FYI: I'm not black, nor am I american.

You must be fucking joking. My parents both grew up in poor villages in Nigeria, and worked their asses off to come here, so their children would have better opportunities.

And here you are, saying that I, my family, and the MILLIONS of other black people should just leave the country?

Do you not realize how racist you sound? What the fuck???

And does anything you're saying justify the deaths of innocent citizens, or police officers?

You may as well as have just kept quiet.

I don't want attention, dumbass.

I want to be able to leave the house and be confident that I'll make it home alive. I don't want to have to fear being gunned down by the police for doing nothing (I'm not a criminal, just so you know). I don't want to have to watch another video of an innocent citizen being murdered and feel like I can't do anything about the situation.

For you to come out, and just bring random numbers, and say it would "help if blacks left the country," as if we are just disease rates and IQ's, is not only racist, but really fucked up.

And then you have the audacity to say I'm just seeking attention too.

Give me a fucking break. My life matters, and I'm tired of you people trying to justify the murders of people look just like me. God damn.

We are well aware that black people kill black people. We speak out and protest against it all the time, but it's not on the news, so people assume we're simply content with it.

What's more is that when black people kill black people, THEY GET SENT TO JAIL. If a white police officer kills a black man, he walks free. Ever heard of Aaron Hess? Perfect example of someone who killed an innocent civilian, and then was awarded Officer of the Year.

Secondly, I hope you know it is possible to focus on multiple problems at a time.

Just because there are black people who kill black people, doesn't mean the police have to join that.

So, please, that's an irrelevant argument, and it's one people love to bring up to justify when innocent people are shot.

If you're frustrated that there are people killing innocent people (the cops in this case), then you're in the same boat as Black Lives Matter.

People like to think that we HATE white people, that we are a "racist organization," or that we are actually an organization to begin with.

We are people who are fed up with the culture of violence within this country, and the lack of trust between the public and the police. We want to reform the police system to change this.

I live in Chicago and I've never seen the BLM movement protest any of the ordinary shootings that happen in the city every day. But as soon as a black man is killed by an officer the entire community takes to the streets.

It seems they spend a disproportionate amount of time and energy worrying about police bias when it's a relatively small issue compared to the gang violence.

I don't disagree about there being a definite bias in the way blacks are treated by police, but it seems outrageous to me that when a black kid is caught in the crossfire of gang shootings it doesn't even make the news and people forget about it and move on as if nothing happened.

The amount of homicides and other violent crimes being committed in impoverished neighborhoods in my opinion should be the primary concern of BLM, but it's hardly even mentioned.
