Thread: How i reply to ub3rs vs how i reply to normal members

APOLLO11AGC - July 8, 2016, 6:32 pm

UB3R Says: Java is a good programming language.

Me Says: Yes, you're completely right, you're a good coder!

Version 2:

Normal Says: Java is a good programming language.

Me Says:

You're a fucking retard.

Let me be explicit for those that have an ineptitude towards general programming and mathematics;

Let's briefly go over features C# offers that JAVA does not:

- Closures
- Delegates (Type Safe function pointers)
- Pointers
- High precision decimals
- Operator Overloading
- Expression trees
- Properties
- Events
- Lambda Expressions
- Anonymous Types
- Iterator Blocks
- Effective stack unwinding with "using" & exception management
- LINQ

Now let's briefly go over reasons why Java is shit overall

1) Most java programmers are morons (You're included)

This mostly has to do with all of those self proclaimed "java programmers", and majority of those java programmers are code monkey's who can't write code for shit.

2) Java is too fragmented

What do you think java is compromised of? A shit load of shitty frameworks jumbled up into one cluster fuck.

3) Java has/had security risks

Where's the unsigned content? Oh wait, these "Framework" developers with zero real-application-development knowledge completely deprecated the use of applet's unless you explicitly allow them to be ran on your computer...

4) C# being the more robust language treats objects more uniformly than java

5) Java developers have no exposure to real-world-application design

6) Java developers can't do anything about security

7) Java developers aren't sure of what's going on

I know what thread you're talking about, and I disagree. What you're talking about is your argument with JIM. You suggested something quite drastic to illustrate your point and he took it quite literally so I think it's a bad example.

Although, there is definitely a form of 'class distinction'. There are a good few HQ regular members and a few shitty ones. There's also a good few HQ Ub3r members and a few shitty ones. It's just how it is. I think it's bad to reply to Ub3rs and hold back on your true opinions in fear of receiving reputation backlash. "Respect through fear is the most despicable thing." - Albert Camus (my second favorite French philosopher. Hash G, if you're reading this, fuck you, honey).

Just for banter's sake:

Java has had lambda expressions since Java 8. It's still drastically behind C# in terms of design, features, etc.

You appear to have incorrectly used the plural word(? term?) "multis".

Sure, I have offsite contact with this member who happens to be a knowledgeable, and often very helpful, multi-accounter. This doesn't make me a multi.

I'm not a multi myself but I'm happy you'd think that. I hope this insult isn't regarding my thread about your product (and all the other RATs being sold on HF).

Please, don't cast aspersions on my account. This is my first ever account and my only ever account.

Provide substance. I want an answer. How does knowing someone who is a multi make me a multi? I'm not a multi.

It's a sad life when regular members who articulate fluently are instantly seen as multi-accounters. That wasn't really the point of the thread but sure, I partially agree.
Java is designed to be fast.. have you seen the HotSpot JIT shit? They're doing their best to optimize it as much as they can. It's evident that older JVM versions were just too slow and they were starting to lag behind.

I'm gonna bite the bullet and say C# is better in a lot more aspects than Java is. Keep in mind I'm saying this even having been a professional Java programmer for a number of years. I no longer write Java any more since it's a waste of time for me.

To be honest, OP isn't biased since he's never really worked with either C# or Java to a reasonable extent. He's a C and ASM programmer. He knows nothing of SOLID OOP, design patterns, etc. he's a low-level whore but I love him either way.

This is very true, people are scared of these people with fucking blue names because on this forum they are given some "power".
But honestly, people need to stop fearing these guys, sure most of them are ASSHOLES, but there are some that are cool.

And the ones who are assholes, I can guarantee they ain't shit in real life, so don't feel scared or bad.

tl;dr: Don't worry about any rude/asshole upgraded people on a forum, they aren't shit in real life anyway. The only reason they're rude here is cause they have a shitty real life. #Facts. Nicer guys seem to have it better in life.

True indeed but my point is that Java isn't the fastest one out there so why would OP compare it's speed?

Java works on many different devices that's it's main point. I consider OP biased because he's judging something which he has no experience in.

Why do you get the idea that Java isn't fast? Let's hear your technical analysis.

I have experience with C#, Java, C, Assembly, C++... more experience than you that's for sure. And as a low level programmer, I know what I'm talking about unlike 99% of the self proclaimed java guru's out there.

Your argument is solely based on cross platform ability? That's absurd, and quite frankly I can use C/C++ for any of those devices. But yes, you're a skid, and you're going off topic.

Java in comparison with C++ is slow. True, it can achieve somewhat the same speed but at the cost of modularity. Google some comparative benchmarks and you'll see what I'm talking about. On another note, Java is moderately fast but it has way too long start-up time. 1.5s to start up the GUI is slow.

But you stated Java is slow as an absolute certainty, now you're speaking in terms of relativity? You've proved nothing other than how stupid you are. Now you're contradicting yourself.. ?

The point at which you start insulting the other party is the point at which you're no longer providing valuable arguments and are purely trash talking. As such, I've no more interest in discussing the matter further. ?

I'm not going to invoke myself into a useless argument with someone who doesn't code, and clearly contradicts themselves as shown above. You can't provide any solid evidence supporting your claim other than "go look at google benchmarks" What ever the fuck that means.
