Grin_temp - July 10, 2016, 11:28 pm

But I never got a reply back.

Yeah yeah, I'm prepared for the "gtfo u scammer" posts.

Could you please open my account so I can work this thing out with Crya?

Here's my last account - UID=3167368

Ice Poseidon - July 10, 2016, 11:30 pm

No lol GTFO this forum once a scammer always a scammer. Sorry but this community does not deserve dirty scammers like u!!!

Gary - July 10, 2016, 11:39 pm

If that really is Grin, glad to see you back and trying to fix things.

Omni decided to say, "Fix this thing with Crya", but he closed my account and banned it w/o me even talking to the dude. Imfao how the fuck was i supposed to fix anything?

God bless this forum lol.

Remember the Writers? Fuck, I submitted like 2-3 more entries before I left b/c i knew my ban was imminent and I wanted to save them the extra trouble of finding members in the few weeks.

Grin is trying to solve things for a mistake. He didn't actually scam. He sent the wrong address. Everyone makes mistakes bro.

Darkwin - July 11, 2016, 12:00 am

You don't need an account to 'solve' things with Crya, Just ask for his Skype/XMPP etc. and take it from there.

My 2 cents.

J?son - July 11, 2016, 12:12 am

Omniscient only reads about 10% of those emails.

You'll have to wait till he comes online to decide your fate.

Furthermore, it was an onsite deal, shouldn't it be resolved onsite?

You were a lot cooler when you just made music. This backseat mod thing isn't working out.

If you (somebody that has scammed thousands of dollars) are trying to come back here but are mad that I ask why take so long then I really hope he doesn't let you back.

If you made a mistake you should've paid him back immediately instead of waiting over half of a year and hoping that tension has calmed down and hoping that you will be reopened so you can scam again.

It definitely does concern me that a scammer is trying to return to the site.

Hi Grin.

I personally never had any dealings with you before closure, but the only point I found really concerning back in december was your entire attitude about what happened. You WERE adamant that you were not responsible despite clearly admitting error.

$800 is a lot of money to some people, especially around the holidays. All I can really say on the matter is I have had stuff fuck up on me here too, but always worked with the users to make it right, even if its at cost out of my own pocket. Thats really what should have been done from the start. Waiting 6 months to even try and address the issue makes us all kinda question the true intentions behind this.

Sorry to say, but ya did this one to yourself. Best suggestion is use the time you have here to try and fix this, and maybe Omni will let you stay.

Good luck.

I just looked over the whole scam report and in the end, as others have pointed out, Omniscient stated Grin can come back if he paid back the person he scammed.

So Grin I just have one suggestion for you. Contact that person via pm and work things out with him or her.

This thread was definately not needed and just caused some drama. Afterwards you can use the contact form or pm system to contact Omniscient.

I understand that and i don't have any right to meddle in this. However, I do believe that there was a certain time period he was given, atleast in Omni's mind.

After which, he didn't return. He didn't fix it with that user. He left HF. Now that he is starting to regret it, he's back.

Nerdi - July 11, 2016, 8:14 am

I think it's cool that you're trying to come back to fix this issue... However, a "mistake was made" as you say and yet you didn't fix the mistake. I understand you may have copied & pasted the wrong address (let's not forget that the funds were transferred quickly after), but that's not the buyer's mistake - that's YOUR mistake to fix. It's scary how long it took you to come back and offer to fix the issue... You owe the guy hundreds of dollars. You should make sure you send the correct address in the future.

Also, it looks like you're admitting to being a multi because you posted your second account...from your third account:

- 1) <https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=789677>
- 2) <https://hackforums.net/reputation.php?uid=3167368>
- 3) the OP

I understand Omni may have said he could return when he pays Crya.... but didn't he return on the LinksysBroadbandRouter account without disclosing that he was Grin & without paying back Crya? I may be wrong here, so take what I'm saying with a grain of salt please. I may not have all the facts ~ I'm going off my memory of the event ages ago, and what's available on the profile pages now.

Thats what he said.. he didn't say to pay him.. he said "work this thing out" and regardless, he can pay the guy and then get his account anyway...
