Yeah, my thoughts exactly - unfortunately at the moment it seems it will really only play those 30 games. I own a few NES games myself and think it would be pretty cool if it had in-built games as well as capability to play cartridges. Maybe it will, nothing like that has been announced though.

Looks interesting, too bad it doesn't play carts but for $2/game it seems worth it.

Roger Waters - July 15, 2016, 6:18 am

More of a novelty but hey, I might pick one up just for the heck of it.

Boelie - July 15, 2016, 9:42 am

That's cool news! :-)

Might be fun to play the classics again!

In?sane? - July 15, 2016, 10:25 am

Going to pick this up just as a collectible since I'm using a Raspberry Pi for emulators and such and since it can't use cartridges i will keep my original NES up.

Elegant - July 15, 2016, 10:29 am

I have a NES from back in the day that I just put away in my room, will definitely be getting this since the games are already pre-installed. SUPER MARIO BROS

I want to get around to finally making one of those DIY emulators that run of the Raspberry Pi Zero in an old Gameboy case :)

Ew, not even Castlevania: Harmony of Dissonance.

Just kidding, looks like a pretty cool idea, but I think having a Pi for emulation and stuff would be a better idea, unless you really do want to have the cool case.

Remember, we don't know if it will work with any other games for your cartridges yet.

This is going to be really cool actually. I hope it's a success for them.

BR?ND?N - July 15, 2016, 5:57 pm

Only $60. Heard about this a few days back. Can't see a good reason NOT to get it. Hopefully they put it on Amazon :/

CueBasE - July 17, 2016, 4:45 pm

This is awesome. I'm definitely getting one.

But yeah; like Nintendo stocks have gone up 70% last time I heard, something crazy like that since the latest Pokemon GO, Mini NES, Nintendo NX and shit

CueBasE - July 17, 2016, 7:18 pm

You gotta love nintendo, because unlike all other developers and manufacturers who just try to put out massive amounts of titles and bullshit, Nintendo takes their time on deciding what to release and what to hold on to for a while.

Yeah and they are focused on an enjoyable and fun experience rather than a graphically sound, realistic experience.

I am currently playing through Metal Gear Solid V and I have to say - yeah, it's a pretty fun game, but it's actually super realistic and I have played platformers that have gotten me more hooked.

Angelus - July 17, 2016, 9:16 pm

Im a "younger gamer" at 13 but I've emulated thousands of NES titles and to be able to practically experience the original thing on a smaller, cheaper scale... Im frigging HYPE

Sega released the Sega Genesis handheld console last year and now due to the success of the Mini Nes announcement - they are releasing a home console version with 80 games on it (some are different to the handheld)

Elegant - July 27, 2016, 7:04 pm

Oh my god, this feel like forever until the console is released. I literally can't wait to play Super Mario Bros 3 like how I used to.

Pi works so good for it, I don't have a proper case for it since I don't really have the option to 3D print out one but it does what it's supposed to at least.

Was also looking at the Gameboy Pi project and it looks fab, would love to do something similar.
