The servers are hosted by one of the most famous VPS service providers.

The support staff which the OP has hired knows his job and works really hard to solve any problems which you encounter.

He is really supportive as myself had some issues of disconnection and he helped me over remote monitor sharing and solved the issue right after the ticket.

The support staff is active almost every time which is what most customers see. Support after sales plays a vital role in sales boost.

Coming to the VPN, i asked about the logging policies and the support guy said that they wont log any data being transferred through their servers, the only thing they log is your details when you signup which can also be faked if you know what i'm speaking. He also said that they wont respond to DMCA at any cost.

There's also a provision to open the ports if you need it for gaming or hosting a local server on your PC. As i don't think he allows blackhat services.

You can still ask it for yourself if he allows it in future.

I ran some tests regarding the anonymity and found the the VPN leaks the DNS which can again be masked easily on the user end. The DNS server is hosted in Netherland and doesn't change irrespective of the server you've connected; Those are the only cons i have got so far.

There are 12 servers which you can connect to which includes Netherlands, USA, Germany, UK, France, Australia, Japan.

You can purchase it via Paypal and Bitcoin too which is another added benefit.

Here's the speed test which i conducted and is pretty fast. I have a 2Mbps download speed allotted from ISP and by connecting it to the VPN hasn't dropped much of the speed.

If a user is doing something they shouldn't be I would assume their Opsec would already be on point. With saying that they would probably mask their IP to order in the first place as well as pay with Bitcoin to limit the trace back to themselves. Thats just my .02 BTC.

When connected to the VPN, no matter the device, my internet speed is exactly the same as if I wasn't on it. This VPN is very impressive and incredibly easy to set up. I have yet to have any down time or connection issues and the support responds almost instantly once you create a ticket on the site. Out of all the positives I think I have yet to discuss the best part about this VPN, the price! This VPN is competitively priced in today's market and is probably the best bang for your buck considering the support you receive, the raw speeds of the VPN, and the fact that they keep no logs. And if I understood right, your site should be automated. Apparently there's a bug, since it accepts the payment, but doesn't show it on the site. I would also fix that for the future.

Odd, could be that the ip was assigned to a NJ server before it was assigned to a NL server. I think you can check on maxmind.
