Thread: How much data do you use per hour?

Aura - July 15, 2016, 3:30 pm

Just wondering how much data you guys are using when playing Pokemon Go? I have the most basic plan with my provider, and it gives me a free 50Mb of data. I disabled the background service on pretty much every apps except Pokemon Go and I'll give it a try soon tonight to see how much data it takes...

If I'm lucky, my job will provide me an iPhone soon with 2Gb of data per month, so I could use it as a hotspot then connect my Nexus 5 to it and play Pokemon.

I already downloaded a few Google Maps locally to my phone and I'll open the app and let it load a bit before leaving the house.

Any other tips/tricks?

Mix - July 15, 2016, 3:31 pm

I have about the same package on my Iphone 6 and It is told that pokemon go uses about 0.01gb/hr I have used a lot of hours running pokemon go and so far with the plan I have no issue.

SIM-403479 - July 15, 2016, 3:31 pm

I haven't actually checked how much iv used so far. I probably should, i'll have gone over by now

Aura - July 15, 2016, 3:43 pm

I managed to catch a Weedle and a Pidgey in my appart so far. RIGHT as I was about to go out, a fucking storm started. FUCK.

Mix3rz, you've been playing for a few hours now?

FireNice - July 15, 2016, 3:44 pm

How do I know how much data I use per hour?

Pung0d - July 15, 2016, 3:45 pm

I've been playing for days and I barely have 10 MB's a data, such goo data mangement for this game lmao.

Aura - July 15, 2016, 3:45 pm

Well, I guess you could check your current data usage for the app (Pokemon Go), go out, play 15 minutes (or even an hour) and then do the maths. Just asking for an average here.

There are a few apps that you can use to track your data usage. I have AT&T and i use about 20mb per hour so not to much its the equivalent of having google maps open all the time.

Zack Fair - July 15, 2016, 3:45 pm

My plan consists of unlimited data per month thankfully so I have no issues in regards to that. I'm sure many are trying to play with Wi-Fi on though!

Depends on your provider, in my case I can open a website provided by my provider where I can see my current data usage. I dont know if you guys have the same in your countries, but in Germany we have that.

Yeah but then you are limited to the zone with the coverage. It fucking sucks because I work in a big ass headquarters (with a huge warehouse) but since it's brand new, the map they use hasn't been updated and it's not on it. So no PokeStops or even Pokemon nearby... Sent them a ticket and they replied instantly saying that they won't be adding anything for now, but will consider my city in the future. Fuck.

luv. - July 15, 2016, 3:46 pm

I've got unlimited but I don't think it takes up a lot of data somehow. Must leech of Wi-Fi or something. I've only got 20-30MB

Zexo - July 15, 2016, 3:46 pm

I have unlimited data and this month I have used around 20 gb of data.

Mr. Corleone - July 15, 2016, 3:46 pm

It's been already said by a dev I think or someone with credit on reddit that it actually takes around 20 to 30 MB per hour.

This is if your app is open the entire time :P

Dessie - July 15, 2016, 3:47 pm

Well since downloading pokemon go, I literally have to buy extra data to be able to do other stuff. Just poff suddenly I had from 5gb to 0.

Aura - July 15, 2016, 3:47 pm

And yeah I also set the warning at 40Mb, and emergency turn off at 50Mb since I don't want to go overboard since they'll charge me a shit ton here.

Steve - July 15, 2016, 3:47 pm

Yeah I thought about this but haven't tested it since I don't have the game yet. I'm sure people are blowing through all of their data and cell phone battery.

I think T-Mobile released a new plan with unlimited data to try to capitalize on this hahaha

Scarlett Johansson - July 15, 2016, 3:47 pm

Unlimited data here on work phone. Haven't had any issues yet or anything but I'm sure the phone companies are loving the overages people are using.

Pillows - July 15, 2016, 3:47 pm

I heard that it takes 10MB/hour for playing nonstop. Not sure if it's true but I don't care since

T-Mobile is giving us free data!

ZerFallen - July 15, 2016, 3:47 pm

Switch to T-Mobile if you love the game that much. They don't charge for data use on the game.

lucky. - July 15, 2016, 3:47 pm

I don't really know, but I went for a walk with it yesterday and have used it here and there on data and so far only 800MB used (which can very well be other things too, I use Skype and YouTube often as well).

Looks low.

It's usually specified in the settings. You'll have to search it up depending on what OS you use (android probably). Google has enough tutorials on it tbh.

Good to know it doesn't use too much data though, would be impossible to play outside otherwise.

Aqutix905 - July 15, 2016, 3:49 pm

i have unlimited data with the plan i have with my galaxy note 5 so i dont really give a fuck how much data i use haahaha, only paying $40/mo tho for unlimited data texting and calling anywhere in the world so i cant complain

There was a trick about syncing the app up with Google Maps and you could avoid using less data. Heard about it on Imgur as a tip when Pokemon GO was exploding the first two days.

Aura - July 15, 2016, 3:50 pm

Data plans in the US are so cheap... here's what I have available (I have the first, most basic one, right now).

I think that's what I did. I downloaded various zone (parent's house, work area, my appart, etc.) maps locally, and it uses them so you save yourself data there already. A LOT of it.

Ah the amount I spent on the game so far is around 1 gb because I will sometimes forget to turn off my data when I get home but I'm sure it is a little lower for actual use.

I'm with Videotron. And it's also our main carrier... back up being Bell. There's literally no other carrier that gets signal in our building. Only Videotron. So the rest are SOL.

Fun fact, my appart is 5 mins from my HQ, and I barely get any signal inside for some reason.

How would you be able to tell how much data you're using on an app? I used about 10 GBs in a week for data, but I doubt it would be just for playing Pokémon Go.

minimalist - July 15, 2016, 3:57 pm

Surprisingly not much, only around 60MB of data on this device and around 110 on my cellular hotspot. I've only been playing for a week though.

only around 0.6 gigs from loading the maps for it and that kinda stuff thats from 25 hours of gameplay

How long does it take your phone to fully charge using that? Like have you ever used it charge once its dead or do you just continually charge as you play?

?Saadi - July 15, 2016, 5:40 pm

I guess the data usage will probably vary from countries to countries, depending on where the servers for Pokemon Go are located.

The pricings also vary ALOT. States and Europe tend to have much cheaper Internet compared to Asia / Middle east.

When I go out I usually leave with a full battery on both devices. Leave it plugged in with the battery in my pocket while i'm using it the whole time. My phone never goes down and the lowest the battery hit was 2 bars.

Should also mention I stay out from like 10pm to around 3am

I have used like 200mb in the past 4 days using the game.

I haven't played it that much due to not actually being able to. But it doesn't use that much.

ur girls daddy - July 17, 2016, 9:47 am

50mb data? That's a lot of data. It's almost enough to load a simple webpage.

ANTHONY - July 17, 2016, 9:49 am

Hardly any. I played 8 hours a day for the first few days and I've only used 250mb

Vexane - July 17, 2016, 9:50 am

71.8MB since I've had it and I'd consider myself pretty far in.

I almost never play on Wi-Fi, so you're safe so long as you either monitor it, or don't make it your life.

Diabolic - July 17, 2016, 10:08 am

Why not just play it on your iPhone, Aura? It's on the app store now. At least it is for me. I have unlimited mobile data, so I've been pretty lucky in terms of having nothing to hold me back.

Aura - July 17, 2016, 10:09 am

Because I don't have an iPhone right now. I'll do once I get added to the support schedule at work, and they'll provide me one with a 2Gb data plan.

Underworldproblem - July 17, 2016, 10:17 am

I get around 10gigs of data so honestly I am fine going around. The only problem that I have is the battery. It runs out fast especially when you're actually using it while on the app.

b?xxy - July 17, 2016, 10:18 am

I haven't gone over my data or even come close.

I don't think it's using too much.

Retribute - July 17, 2016, 10:23 am

I gave it a run yesterday for around an hour and a half and it only used up 11mb.

Anon008 - July 17, 2016, 10:24 am

I can't give an exact figure, but not much at all, like 2MB an hour for me I think or maybe that's a little too big

Underworldproblem - July 17, 2016, 10:30 am

I'm glad pokemon go doesn't use up any data like barely anything. However, charging is a b* because I need to order one off of amazon, a portable one.

Tyler? - July 17, 2016, 10:48 am

I keep a close eye on our data since Verizon will rape us with overage charges.

So far, for 4 people playing on the same plan, we've use about 1.5GB-2GB so far from the looks of my data counter.

I wish Verizon would follow suit and drop any data counting from Pokemon Go like ATT and Tmobile did.

I meant instead of using the iPhone you're getting as a hotspot, to then play it on your Nexus. 2GB should be enough depending on how much you play Pokémon Go.

minimalist - July 18, 2016, 3:57 pm

I'm currently sitting at 220MB data used, cellular only.

MrJamieMcC - July 18, 2016, 4:14 pm

My phone doesnt actually use that much data. Maybe 0.005 ish every hour. Nothing much. I donwloaded the Google maps to help my battery life and data. It helps a lot!

Crowley - July 18, 2016, 4:42 pm

Tmobile gave me some serious awesome data plans just for playing pokemon go but i already have unlimited everything LOL

Maradonnie - July 18, 2016, 4:44 pm

I read it uses around 0.01GB per hour, and it seems accurate to me. I can play enough each day and not go over my data limit of 2GB a month.

findingnature - July 18, 2016, 4:44 pm

Can I check my data usage on my iPhone if I have unlimited data? I'm just curious myself even though it doesn't even really matter.

I don't have the iPhone yet ? I might have it soon, it depends on whether or not I get added to the support schedule at work. And yeah, 2GB will be plenty enough to play, since I limit every other apps on the data and only allow Pokemon Go to go through.

Moeseph - July 18, 2016, 4:46 pm

I've had the game for about 24 hours and it's used about 50 mb between 2 phones.

M1L3NK0 - July 18, 2016, 4:51 pm

Barely uses anything. I have a 2.5gb high speed (though after I hit that, it just slows down so I basically have unlimited data?) data plan, and it has hasn't even hit half yet since release.

SoulZeh - July 18, 2016, 4:57 pm

Well, I use none because I'm using Unlimited and I love it, however it's sadly going to change in 2 months, brand new phone so I get the first 3 months free with vodafone.

Shrooms - July 18, 2016, 4:58 pm

It uses barely anything, I get 2.5gb or something and I'm no where near running out.

Go to Settings>Mobile Data and scroll down, it tells you what apps are enabled on your data and how much data they have used. ?

Aliasllias - July 18, 2016, 4:59 pm

Used 159 mb so far with Pokemon Go and played it a lot so far, doesn't use as much as I think it would have. Uses around 10mb per hour.

I'm actually a little bit worried incase I do get extremely addicted to pokemon go and then when my unlimited data runs out, I'll be using it a shit ton, however I have 3GB, which seems unlikely to go over.

Hern - July 18, 2016, 6:01 pm

Pokemon barely uses any data, plus I have my location area saved through google maps which is the API that PoGo uses so its even less.

Jesse Pinkman - July 18, 2016, 6:01 pm

I burned through 10 gigs in 2 weeks.... So I haven't been able to play for the last 2 weeks haha. New data cycle starts tomorrow

• Kyle • - July 19, 2016, 12:35 am

I haven't really noticed a big dent in my data since using pokemon go so I dont worry about it at all and just let my data rack up to its max every month as normal lmao

Vince - July 19, 2016, 12:41 am

Well luckily T-Mobile is starting a data plan specifically for Pokemon Go that most will qualify for. I've already opted in for it so its free unlimited data for Pokemon Go.

Essence - July 19, 2016, 12:49 am

Haven't used too much.

The game actually doesn't use up that much so that's good. I can see how some peoples bills have probably sky rocketed though since the game came out lol!

Krule - July 19, 2016, 12:54 am

I guess the data usage will probably vary from countries to countries, depending on where the servers for Pokemon Go are located.

The pricings also vary ALOT. States and Europe tend to have much cheaper Internet compared to Asia / Middle east.
