Thread: Pokmon rarity chart

Princeton - July 18, 2016, 7:38 am

Hello everyone, I found this chart on reddit today and I thought this might be useful to put thing in perspective. I'm not sure about some of the listings as they may change from an area to another. Also what do you think about the region exclusive ones?

Pokemon rarity is based on your location. Magnemite is very common, I even saw 2 of them in their usual spot just hanging out, yet somewhere else it might not even spawn.

Also, why is Omanyte special? I found one at a gas station.

I also think I've seen a couple specials and epics in my area. I've hatched one mythical and I would like more but for some reason I walk and my kilometers arent even adding up :/

Already been posted.

I don't think this chart is entirely correct though..

It all depends on what the area is like where you are.

Rhyhorn is my rarest pokemon I'm guessing. Didn't see all of them on these list though.

Hopefully I have some luck today.

To all of those saying it have been posted, it wasn't posted as thread only on replies, I think this chart deserves it's own post.

The rarest pokémon I have found so far is a Rhyhorn

Oh shit really? I didn't know there were region exclusive pokemon. I guess this where trading comes in handy. (Hoping it's not person to person trading)
