Thread: Clean up the Premium Marketplace.

CheGuevara? - July 23, 2016, 11:51 am

The eBooks are getting out of control, has been since a long time.

They are flooding the Premium Marketplace with all their nonsense.

I get that many people pay for stickies for their eBooks, but even with my idea I think they still will. But I don't think you really care much about stickies.

The way the eBook works is that they are mostly a group of friends, or members of a Skype Group, vouching and what not for one and another in their threads, to make people buy their eBooks.

I don't know what keeps the victim (legit buyer) from not stating the truth about the eBook. Is it psychological? I don't know really.

But the way it looks now, it is unhealthy. It is a mess.

It really needs a clean up! And this is not only coming from myself.

So, this is where we would suggest for eBooks to be sold.

Picture below.

<https://i.imgur.com/Vsjfv8F.png>

OR! All eBooks should be put in the eBook Bazaar.

Nowhere else! No eBooks should be allowed outside the eBook Bazaar!

The marketplace is flooded with these eBooks and I think we both know how it works regarding eBooks.

It's just an idea, honestly it would do so much good. It would be a change for the greater good, and I think 99% of the users would appreciate it.

Just a tip, what do you think? Is it possible?

Sincerely,

CheGuevara.

I made a similar suggestion the other day: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5342863>

A lot of people have been making similar suggestions and stating something needs to change.

This has my support entirely. I know I'm fresh back to the forum so my opinion doesn't hold a lot of ground, but in my opinion the Marketplace used to be a much better place 2-3 years ago before eBooks became rampant in Premium Sellers.

Nightmaree - July 23, 2016, 12:10 pm

The premium section would be dead then tbh. No one comes out with new programs and such.

I'd rather have quality over quantity. I don't see the issue here, and I don't see how you can see a problem with this. But we can't all think alike!

Maybe the premium market should have a approval proces? i dont know if that whould work but it whould clean it up real good

They don't really seem to care that much about the marketplace.

So I don't think this is something they would put effort into.

I know my idea is pretty much putting the dirt under the rug instead of completely 'removing' it, but at least it will clean up the Premium Marketplace.

Also, removing the dirt is not possible. There is money to be made, (stickies, tags) etc.

And if people wish to look for eBooks, they can simply go into the forum, and enjoy their time in there with the rest of the eBook people.

This would require too much time of mods. Either enforcing all users to post to the ebook subforum, or making a new premium users ebook subforum would be great

Yeah, perhaps they should ONLY and ONLY be sold in there if so.

And if not, add it to where I were pointing out in the picture in the OP.

I'm not sure, but one way or another something must happen.

Roger Waters - July 23, 2016, 12:14 pm

It would be nice to restrict eBook sales to the eBook section in my opinion. The Premium Sellers and Secondary Sellers are mostly eBook sales. Having this section chuck full with the same type of product gives other sellers a disadvantage to have their sales thread in there (products that don't already have a section).

Yes! This. Why on earth couldn't this be done? It's not that hard to implant this system.

Carl Elias - July 23, 2016, 12:17 pm

I support this 200%! I agree that there is too many, and we do have a forum called "Ebook Bazaar" but not many use it because no one really goes there I guess.

Now some days I think the forum is worst than others, but if people would report the ebooks in the premium sellers forum for being in the wrong forum, then you have a valid report, and the thread should be moved or closed for wrong forum. Not saying it would happen, but it is a valid report reason

Forc?d - July 23, 2016, 12:17 pm

The specific standard for HF products have never been high, at least for none software products. Especially the "money making " eBooks, 30 usd for 9 pages does not make u rich. Hard work does.

At least the new "vouching" rule is a step in the correct direction.

Report them? They have been approved for getting stickies. Why would a report remove their sales thread? There are no rules against selling eBooks as far as I know?

And this is what must be changed.

SUI-3183372 - July 23, 2016, 12:21 pm

Currently as it stands, according to staff, Ebooks do not have to be confined to the E-Book Bazaar. An upgraded member has the choice of where to post it, E-Book section or Premium Sellers. Che is trying to get that changed so E-Books are either confined to the E-Book Bazaar or to a Premium E-Book section in a sub forum next to the SST and Cryptography sub forums.

Again, I support this.

In all honesty, there is so much drama and negativity towards E-Books, I highly encourage Omni to just blacklist them from being sold.
It's widely known that they're all scams.

I think it would be cool if we allowed educational ebooks such as how to dox, or maybe even spreading methods.
Money making ebooks or methods, no way. These are known scams & only cause problems.

Anyone else agree?

That isn't true at all. They may be false advertised but not all are scams. There's rarely any ebook disputes open. We should remove the CE section then? That causes the most disputes on this forum.

Because 70% of HF Members aren't stupid enough to buy them anymore, but new members are. E-Book scammers are practically using loopholes in HF's rules in order to promote their shit products.

It's a shady business and all it does it deteriorate the quality of the HF Marketplace.

Like some of the users have said above, it should be quality over quantity. Ebooks are spam AF and need to be put in another section, they can have their activity there. Other marketplace sections are just fine if you think about it.

Ebooks are to be put in a confined space, hidden from public, such that it can no longer harm the innocent.

I don't even use the marketplace anymore and the ebooks still make me want to cry. Great idea. They shouldn't be allowed outside their own section.

Indeed. But how do we make this happen? No doubt 98% of HackForum wants what we are suggesting and asking for.

No, it is far from complete. The new rule additions is nothing compared to what this suggestion will hold. Keep ALL the eBooks in the eBook Bazaar (or where my picture in OP suggests), leave them out of Premium Marketplace and Second Marketplace.

Nobody needs them there. It's wrong and it's spreading like a disease.

Someone said that HF makes good money out of the stickies and the tags being bought for these eBooks, I have a hard time believing that.

But if that would be the case, I understand why the Marketplace is a mess and why the eBooks are allowed.

Korean™ - July 27, 2016, 3:33 pm

The premium sellers sections SHOULDN'T contain any e-books in it except for stickied posts in my opinion.

Otherwise, the premium sellers sections can contain other products that aren't e-books or "money making methods"

Such code, bots, physical products (?), etc. I don't mind if the premium sellers section gets a little less traffic and posts, at least there'll be a solid subforum (e-book bazaar), for e-books anyways.

I've contacted Omni but he told me not to PM any suggestions.

I've contacted Staff members but was referred to "Suggestions and Ideas", which is where I put this thread. Now, who will read this and take action? I don't see the point in having an ebook section if people still post in other sections and then they get it stickied. So obviously it doesn't bother omni.

But as you can see people are not happy with this.

This is why we have this thread, to make a difference.

To make a change for the greater good.

And obviously it doesn't bother Omni, it bothers the users.

And without the users there are no forum.

We are the forum.

One can hope they will listen to us and take action.

It's very simple. Put all eBooks in the eBook bazaar.

You'll see a huge difference in the Marketplace once that is done.

Paying to have a topic stickied in a section is completely different. You can have whatever you want stickied wherever you want, as long as you've paid.

Posting in sections should be limited to specific sections however. The Ebooks should be limited to their own section or a new Premium Ebooks section up with the SST subforums and the cryptography subforum.

Exactly. We must keep this thread alive until someone takes action.

Omni already hit one Ebook seller for being unethical today, hopefully he reads this and continues that trend.

Sorry, but no.
