Thread: [\[IOS 9 COMPATIBLE\] Should I make a tutorial on hacking IOS? \[NO JAILBREAK\]](#)

Plethora - July 24, 2016, 10:00 am

So I found a way to hack IOS devices without any kind of jailbreak and complete compatibility with all IOS versions above 5.0. It's completely free and a awesome method that only requires your targets IOS device for about 5 minutes, and it completely undetectable by the owner of the IOS device.

This hack allows you to upload apps to the target device remotely, remove the passcode remotely, and to lock the device remotely, message the device remotely (A.K.A Make a popup with the desired message, not texting...), and a few more other cool ass things.

So my question to you guys, should I even make a tutorial on this?

If so, should I make it a paid e-book or a free thread in the hacking tutorial section? If I make it paid, I will have 3 vouch copies out for upgraded and trusted members.

Please vote accordingly! And post your opinions below!!! :)

Have a nice day guys! ?

Hello Plethora,

What you have in hand may be a very good tutorial. You can decide yourself if you want it to be paid or free. For me it would be how much time i spend in to it.

You should consider that when you are going to sell it you will have a hard time since you are fairly new people wont trust you 123.

Please enlighten me how to message a device remotely.

Thank you.

I am fairly new, which is why I decided to give away 3 vouch copies if this tutorial is created. To trusted members, so they can vouch and or discredit the tutorial if they like or don't like it.

You will still have a hard time.

Text them, duh.

Just kidding, this allows you to create a pop up with your desired message on the device. :)

The tutorial would probably go around 5 dollars per copy, which is a good price I believe. But I am still totally into making this for free just to contribute to the community as a whole.
