Thread: [\[Release\] Autoclicker that bypasses anti-cheats](#)

Duk. - July 25, 2016, 11:31 pm

Compile it rename the executable to firefox-updater.exe and move it into your firefox folder.

Anyways it's bound to M requires auto-hotkey hover over the click test and hold M.
Delete key terminates it.

Save as .ahk then compile

Spoiler (Click to View)Code Del:: Hotkey, *~$m, Toggle

End::

ExitApp

*~$m::

Loop

GetKeyState,state,m,P

if state = U

break

Click

sleep 25

}

Return

Gets you 16 cps undetected

Updated the thread since people are selling autoclickers x.x

How can I modify this to make it a toggle instead of having to hold M?

Av?!?r - October 28, 2016, 3:47 pm

Yeh, nobody wants to have to hold a key on their keyboard the entire time, tho..

Lol, to which anticheats are you referring that this autoclicker bypasses?

All of them if you add in randomized delay lmao

I mean, simply Googling "autoclicker for minecraft" would get you hundreds of results, and you wouldn't have to install AHK and compile stuff.

It bypasses the anti-cheats that you claim yours to bypass considering it isn't exactly hard ?

Never said it was difficult to make it bypass lol. Nevertheless, I'm not claiming that mine works; it does.

And while yours may bypass various anticheats after the user adds their own code to make it so, not everyone knows how to code AHK. You could have, at the very least, done that yourself if you were going to post this in the Minecraft section of all places. Nobody cares to come all the way to HF for autoclickers that don't bypass when they could just Google for one lol.

The base is there and if people don't want to waste their money on a free auto-clicker they can edit it quick and change the amounts,etc.
