Here's how you can do that for free:

1. Choose a long password that include letters, numbers and symbols. Use a generator here: <https://lastpass.com/generatepassword.php>
  2. If 2FA (2-factor Authentication) is available, use it. This will ensure no one without access to your phone will be able to get into your account.
  3. If you feel like you can't remember a long password, use LastPass which saves and encrypts all your passwords. You can use a single master password every time you want LastPass to fill in the username/password for whatever site you are browsing. If you have iPhone 5S or higher then Touch ID can provide an extra layer of security.
  4. Never write down your password on a piece of paper and never share it with anyone online or use it as username in 3rd party sites.
- OP.. why sell it for $5? I mean, you are teaching people something that is publicly available and requires a little bit of common sense.

I am pretty sure that people who look for "HackForums" know what 2FA means and realise how strong their password is/can be.

I have been in Internet Marketing for well over 7 years and I am a Business & Computer Science major. I can tell you from my experience that there are e-Books that similar and in some cases the very same (we had Travis do that last week) and all someone has to do is just follow the steps I mentioned above in order to secure their accounts.

I am not talking about businessmen who have tons of money on various bank accounts because they have their own security experts. The "someone" I am talking about is just a regular folk like you and me.

But please, don't charge people $5 for information publicly available. I'd give it a pass if it was on some general forum with people aged over 30-35 years but selling general account security tips on a place called "HackForums" is meaningless. Just close the thread and come up with something unique.

I would personally pay $5 if you made a 3-5 minutes educational video on how to protect/secure your online accounts. But paying $5 for an eBook that tells most of people something they know, nope.

While I can't deny that you've listed a couple essential steps to keep accounts secure in your previous post, I can say that there are plenty more steps to follow in order to stay completely secure.

Steps that most people have no idea about such as:

- Recent exploits (Tmobile)
- RAT's (PC & Mobile)
- Social Engineering
- Leakedsource, DB Dumps & SQL Attacks

I'm not sure whether op included the above info in his E-Book & how to avoid being a victim of them or not, however I do think $5.00 is worth spending to learn some new tips.

Also, I understand your lack of trust among E-Books because they're usually shit and I can help but agree. But once again, keep in mind that not everyone has "... been in Internet Marketing for well over 7 years and I am a Business & Computer Science major."

If you have a problem with that then please remember that no one is forcing you to buy it, so please stop sales trashing. Thanks.

Hey, this is my review of RealMafia's product: [\[\$3.99\]\(\$3.99\) \[DON'T LOSE YOUR OG ACCOUNTS\] =>>SECURE YOUR ONLINE ACCOUNTS<=< \[VOUCHED\] \[+\]](#), as requested in this thread.

Initial thoughts: This eBook is written and formatted neatly but, to be frank, more images could have gone along with the paragraphs of text to keep buyers engaged. The seller could have also included obscure methods to secure purchased accounts, as they would increase the value of the eBook. I'll be transparent with what this product is: a guide to securing your online accounts, and nothing more (not much to do with social media).

Method review: Public information can be accurate information. This can come in handy for people who aren't unrealistically informed about the dangers of the Internet. This guide includes topics that are unknown to most people, such as exploits, malware, and more. I'd say that this eBook is worth the price that the seller is asking for it.

Bottom lines (general):Public products do not point to a non-working product.

I have tested this product and I can verify the seller's claims.
