Silicon Valley - Temp - July 27, 2016, 11:49 am

I now realize Omniscient has given me multiple chances to avoid closure.

Yet, it seemed inevitable. I felt that something like this would happen and I feared it. No matter how hard I tried to avoid it, it still happened. One way or another I knew, some day I would get closed. And today is that day. My goal was to clean up the marketplace and the deal disputes sections. I've failed to accomplish it. It is truly unfortunate. My past haunts me. And I live by a question everyone should ask themselves. "If today were the last day of my life, would I want to do what I am about to do today?"

A couple days ago, HFAlert's thread got closed. The project was being shut down for crawling HF. I should have just left it shut down. I don't know why I fought for it. Probably because months of work have been put into it, but long story short it was re-opened. And that's what lead to my downfall on HF.

Somehow I got closed, I don't know who I harassed. What I did do though, is that I PMed scammers asking them if they were going to resolve their disputes and I basically attempted to get in contact with both parties. I'm hoping to figure out exactly why I was closed. People do learn from their mistakes. Policy is a policy, and I'm not going to argue about it. I'm sure Omniscient had a good reason to impose these actions against my account. But once again, people do learn from their mistakes.

I am a multi, and I've been on HF since 2010. And what I can tell everyone here is that people change. I don't know why I keep coming back to HF. Some people hold grudges against staff actions and I'm not one of those people. I respect Omniscient's decision to close my account. I guess I can spend more time now focusing on other things. I'm sure HFAlert could have had an even bigger impact on the community if it was executed differently. I've heard that I was closed for someone on my staff team harassing another user or even perhaps for me making a staff team.

I've previously stated that the HFAlert staff team is not associated with HF Staff. And I was hoping HFAlert Staff could make a difference. Yesterday me, Stashy, and #Doge were resolving a dispute between two parties. Hours were spent and we heard both sides of the story. I'll honestly miss HF, and I'll probably be dragged back to it again. A lot of people may hold grudges against me for being added into HFAlert. People are stating that another user may re-create HFAlert. Most likely it will be me since I cannot stay away from HF. I've always had good intentions and I always respected site policy, I still fucked up though. It's funny how things can change so quickly. I'll miss everyone.

I just asked Acceptable. I was very LQ on my previous account, so I don't really wish to reveal it to the entire public. If anyone wants to know more information about my past. My skype is siliconvalley46

I too read every word. I was actually paying attention to the HFAlert stuff believe it or not. I generally don't pay attention to the marketplace at all, in the slightest, but I just saw it in the "View New Posts" area xD. I originally thought it was a terrible idea as it sounded like a "collection agency" more than anything else.

No one here is in a position to act as an enforcer of deals. It's just not how our Marketplace works.

This happened years ago too when a group decided they'd do a very similar thing. Ultimately they coordinated to abuse reputation and harass members who they felt were scammers.

It's a simple thing. You nor anyone here can do anything about someone being scammed.

When your car is stolen or your house is broken into you don't go to your neighbors to help hunt down the thief. Well, you do if you're a vigilante that's going to problem do something illegal once you find the thief.

I allowed your userscript only because it was just a notification that fed off existing HF material and you had made sure the crawling was minimalized. But when you take that next step to interfere with our Marketplace I must take action.

I allow middleman. I already encourage Deal Dispute resolutions. Member involvement in a dispute between parties should be minimal.

Also, don't feel so bad for OP. He was a ban evader that I allowed back. He was closed for posting Starbucks fraud. He had his rare second chance.

<https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=2426547>

And I found it offensive you created a psuedo-group HFAlert Staff. As if you and a few rep abusers had any official HF position. Guaranteed I stopped what was going to be a real problem in less than a week.

Quote:This is what happens when you try to create your own staff on somebody else's forum.

One would think that to be some common sense.

Quote:I just don't get what's wrong with creating a staff team for a PRODUCT?

That's not what their mission statement inferred.

I'll continue to add reasonable tools like the Trust Scan for members to make good decision in deals. It will never stop scamming though and for two reasons. Members make risky choices and scammers love to scam for the easy unethical money. Nothing will ever stop those two things.

Our Marketplace functions and I'll argue, thrives, from the fact we're very hands-off.

I'm back online after a few days off. Fresh and ready to kick some butt. Let's get back to the normal day operations of HF.
