i really apologize if i have done wrong ?no it's cool, and it's good that you're contributing, but in my opinion you'll do better by exploring newer topics and attacks. People interested in LFI can search around and find hundreds of tutorials, video or text so I'm not seeing a lot of use in re-inventing the wheel

Noice tutorial, someone used this on my site a couple days ago to add pictures to the site. I fixed it making it so it requires a password to upload to my site now, but you should try to do something to my site.

I need people that are good at exploiting vulnerabilities in websites and I'd like you to try to exploit my site. Nothing big, just see if you are able to somehow upload a php file to the site.

PM me for the site name, or just look at my user bar. Thanks

CGI based attacks and httpd hooking techniques (ap_hook_handler, quick handles etc)

Object injections through magic PHP methods like __ToString(), but if you'd make a POP tutorial I'd be really impressed.

Other XML based code injection oddities like XSLTProcessor, crossdomain.xml and DOM based client attacks that exceed XSS.
